ATLANTA, Georgia — LedgerWay has been named Accounting Business of the Year in the Global 100 – 2026 Awards, recognizing the firm’s commitment to redefining what small business owners should expect from their tax, accounting, and advisory partner.

Built around a growth-first philosophy, LedgerWay goes beyond traditional compliance services by combining proactive tax strategy and fractional CFO-level advisory into one integrated relationship. The firm helps business owners understand their numbers, identify opportunities, and make informed decisions that support long-term growth.

Raising the standard for small business accounting support

For many entrepreneurs, accounting support has historically focused on looking backward — closing books after the fact, filing annual tax returns, and answering questions only when they arise. LedgerWay’s recognition reflects a different approach: providing business owners with a proactive financial partner that plans ahead, identifies opportunities early, and connects financial data to real-world decisions.

The Global 100 – 2026 judging panel recognized LedgerWay’s emphasis on year-round strategy and its integrated service model designed to eliminate the disconnect between accounting, tax planning, and advisory support.

By bringing these services together, LedgerWay helps owners improve financial clarity, reduce avoidable surprises, and make confident decisions around hiring, investing, and scaling.

“This recognition matters because it reinforces a simple belief: small business owners deserve more than compliance,” said Damyan Dimitrov, CEO of LedgerWay. “They deserve a partner who understands where they're headed and brings ideas before they have to ask. Our team is built around proactive strategy, clear communication, and responsiveness because that's what real growth demands."

An integrated team without unnecessary handoffs

LedgerWay differentiates itself through a coordinated service structure that keeps tax strategy, accounting, and advisory aligned. Instead of requiring clients to manage multiple providers or disconnected specialists, the firm delivers support through one unified team.

This approach creates greater accountability, faster decision-making, and a deeper understanding of each client's business goals.

LedgerWay also emphasizes a "named team" model, allowing clients to work consistently with the same professionals. In an industry where frequent handoffs can force business owners to repeatedly explain their situation, LedgerWay prioritizes continuity and relationship-based support.

The goal is not only to provide accurate financial reporting, but to become an extension of each client's team — understanding the business, its challenges, and its opportunities so recommendations are based on context, not just numbers.

"When tax, accounting, and advisory work in isolation, the owner becomes the translation layer," Dimitrov added. "Our model removes that burden. We coordinate internally so the owner can focus on running the business while having a trusted team that's thinking ahead."

Responsiveness as a business standard

Another factor highlighted by the Global 100 – 2026 recognition is LedgerWay's focus on communication. The firm has implemented a one-business-day response guarantee, with a two-business-day response window during tax season.

This commitment addresses one of the most common frustrations among small business owners: difficulty getting timely answers when important decisions need to be made.

Whether clients are preparing for financing, evaluating investments, or planning future growth, LedgerWay focuses on making financial guidance accessible when it matters most.

The firm reports maintaining a 4.8-star Google rating, which it attributes to consistent service standards, proactive communication, and a client-focused approach.

Built for growth-minded business owners

LedgerWay works primarily with growth-minded service business owners who have outgrown traditional CPA or want more strategic support from their financial partner.

The firm serves businesses across industries including professional services, home services, real estate, e-commerce, and entrepreneurs managing multiple ventures.

For these owners, accurate books and tax filing are only the foundation. They also need insight into profitability, cash flow, tax decisions, and operational improvements.

LedgerWay's model is designed to bridge that gap by transforming financial information into practical business guidance.

“Many accounting relationships are structured to tell you where you've been,” said Damyan. “Our job is to help you understand where you're going and how to get there. That includes year-round strategy, regular guidance, and plain-English explanations that allow business owners to act with clarity.”

LedgerWay organizes its services around three integrated pillars: tax strategy and planning, fractional CFO advisory, and IRS audit representation.

While audit representation is available when needed, LedgerWay emphasizes that its primary value comes from helping clients use tax, accounting, and advisory services together proactively.

Tax strategy provides year-round planning. Accounting creates visibility into business performance. Fractional CFO advisory helps owners evaluate opportunities, model scenarios, and make stronger decisions.

“Each part of our service builds on the last,” said Dimitrov. “Accurate accounting creates better financial visibility. That gives us the information needed to develop proactive tax strategies. Those savings create opportunities to reinvest in the business, and over time, each step strengthens the next.”

Using technology to improve financial guidance

LedgerWay continues to invest in modern technology to improve efficiency, accuracy, and client service. By reducing manual processes, the firm's team can spend more time focused on strategy, advising, and proactive support.

For clients, this approach creates better visibility, smoother workflows, and cleaner financial data. For the LedgerWay team, it enables stronger consistency, improved deadline management, and more proactive communication.

Through its growth-first model, LedgerWay aims to help small business owners move beyond compliance and gain a financial partner focused on clarity, strategy, and long-term success.
