To launch P.A.R.I.S., TERAVARNA opens a global call through an international juried art competition. Participants working across varied styles and media will submit their original works in the form of paintings, sketches, sculptures, photography, digital art and mixed media, printmaking, and other visual art forms. The theme of the juried competition is 'OPEN theme'; therefore, participants are free to share their contemporary vision without any constraint, contributing to the richness and vibrant energy of the contemporary art exhibition in Paris.

Winners of the juried contest will exhibit their work for free at Hôtel Particulier Beaujon in Paris, an elegant venue that reflects the city's eternal connection with art and culture. P.A.R.I.S. will present a digital display of the best exhibits in Paris alongside physical representations. The artworks for digital display will be showcased on large display screens, engaging emerging voices waiting for global representation when they are not able to attend the exhibition in person or ship their works to the venue.

P.A.R.I.S. ensures that geographical barriers do not stand in the way of international recognition.

Selected participants will benefit from TERAVARNA's social media promotional initiatives, connecting their works with curators, collectors, galleries, and art enthusiasts across countries and continents.

For artists seeking international exposure, the significance of exhibiting in P.A.R.I.S. is massive. The exposure of P.A.R.I.S. aims to have a significant impact on the participants, as the French destination adds more weight and value to an artist's portfolio. The global art market is open to such collaborations that encourage cultural exchange, transcending time and space barriers.

This November, the Hôtel Particulier Beaujon will transform into a place for creative interaction and dialogues, encouraging storytelling skills, cultural perspectives, and expertise of the winners of this juried competition. The art exhibition in Paris will see a diverse mix of talents sharing insights, as the aesthetic ambiance boosts international visibility for the exhibiting artists.

A panel of jurors will evaluate the entries after the submissions close on July 31, 2026.

As the international online gallery TERAVARNA strives to create opportunities for emerging talents, P.A.R.I.S. 2026 heralds a new beginning of French collaboration, placing contemporary voices in a global spotlight.
