clients nationwide, providing specialized financial leadership that helps contractors improve profitability, strengthen cash flow, and make more informed business decisions.

In addition to managing billions in contractor revenue, LLÜM has processed more than $700 million in financial transactions, giving the firm's accounting professionals firsthand experience with the financial complexities that construction businesses face every day.

For more than 27 years, LLÜM has focused exclusively on serving construction companies. Rather than operating as a general accounting practice, the firm specializes in the unique financial challenges of commercial contractors, residential builders, specialty trades, developers, and other businesses throughout the built environment. This industry specialization allows LLÜM to provide construction CFO services alongside accounting systems, financial reporting, job costing, work in progress (WIP) reporting, cash flow forecasting, and fractional CFO solutions designed specifically for the construction industry.

"Construction accounting" requires much more than traditional bookkeeping," said Justin Atneyel,

CEO of LLŪM. "Every project, every contract, and every financial decision impacts profitability. Our mission has always been to give contractors the financial clarity they need to grow confidently while eliminating the uncertainty that often comes with managing construction finances."

Unlike traditional accounting firms that serve multiple industries, LLŪM's team works exclusively within construction, allowing clients to benefit from proven financial processes built around contractor operations. The firm's services include outsourced accounting, controller services, fractional CFO leadership, financial reporting, budgeting, forecasting, job costing, WIP reporting, cash flow management, and strategic financial planning.

As construction companies continue adopting cloud technology and AI-powered financial systems, LLŪM continues investing in modern accounting solutions that improve reporting accuracy, streamline operations, and provide business owners with faster access to financial data for decision-making. The company recently expanded its technology capabilities through strategic AI initiatives designed specifically for construction accounting workflows.

These milestones reflect LLŪM's continued commitment to helping construction companies build stronger financial foundations while supporting long-term growth and profitability.
