Located in Highland Park, Body By Bloch has built a reputation for its surgical expertise and refined aesthetic care. The addition of UltraClear Laser reflects the practice's commitment to treatments that deliver measurable improvement while respecting the natural structure of the skin. By integrating this technology into both the surgical and medspa settings, Dr. Bloch continues to elevate what patients can expect from modern skin resurfacing.

Skin Rejuvenation Is Moving Toward Precision

The landscape of aesthetic treatments has shifted. Patients today are more informed and more selective. They want visible improvement in skin tone, texture, and overall quality, without the extended recovery associated with traditional resurfacing methods. “Patients are looking for results they can see without stepping away from their lives for weeks,” said Dr. Steven Bloch.

“UltraClear gives us the ability to treat the skin with precision and control. It allows us to improve texture, reduce signs of aging, and support long-term skin health in a way that fits how people actually live today.”

Expertise Matters More Than Ever

As laser treatments become more widely available, patients often underestimate the importance of provider experience. Skin resurfacing is never a one-size-fits-all treatment. Skin type, thickness, and underlying structure all influence how the laser should be used. Dr. Bloch advises patients to seek care from an experienced provider who understands both the technology and the anatomy beneath the surface. Improper settings or over-treatment can compromise results and increase the risk of complications. “Laser technology is powerful,” Dr. Bloch added. “But the outcome depends on how it’s used. The right approach is tailored, measured, and based on a clear understanding of the patient’s skin.”

A Broader Approach to Aesthetic Care

UltraClear Laser is part of a larger treatment philosophy at Body By Bloch. The practice emphasizes balance, structure, and long-term results across both surgical and non-surgical services. Rather than treating isolated concerns, Dr. Bloch evaluates the face and skin as a whole. Patients often combine laser resurfacing with injectables, facial balancing, or surgical procedures to achieve more cohesive results. For example, pairing laser treatments with dermal fillers can improve both skin quality and underlying volume, creating a more refined and natural outcome.

A Refined Patient Experience

The addition of UltraClear enhances the patient experience at both Body By Bloch and Skin Deep Medical Spa. The environment is designed to feel calm, private, and intentional, supporting a patient-centered approach from consultation through follow-up care. Each treatment is delivered with attention to detail and patient comfort, ensuring that patients feel informed and supported at every step.
