

Vigna Law Group: Bellwether Early Use of Depo-Provera in Focus, 1992-2002

LOS ANGELES, CA, UNITED STATES, July 30, 2026 /EINPresswire.com/ -- "We represent four Defense Bellwether selections in the California consolidated litigation involving women who were prescribed Depo-Provera before 2002. These cases involve allegations concerning Pfizer's conduct from the 1950s through the 1990s that are part of the ongoing litigation," states Greg Vigna, MD, JD, national neurological injury attorney.

Dr. Greg Vigna, MD, JD, states, "We represent dozens of women who were prescribed Depo-Provera between 1992 and 2002, including clients involved in the upcoming California bellwether trials. The company requires signal analysis for newly described complaints. The litigation includes allegations regarding whether Depo-Provera is associated with a dose-dependent increase in meningiomas and how reports and safety signals were evaluated over time."

Dr. Vigna adds, "As part of our representation, we are reviewing issues related to signal analysis. Through the California JCCP discovery process, we have requested emails and other documents relating to meningioma reports submitted to Pfizer. The litigation includes allegations regarding whether the company's conduct was consistent with applicable regulatory and good clinical practice requirements."

California Bellwether selections represented by the Vigna Law Group: California: Case No. 26CV189984, Case No. 26CV179081, Case No. 26CV178116, Case No. 26CV179212
