Services run across custom software, blockchain, cloud, DevOps, staff augmentation, and application testing. A recent engagement supplied React front-end development, QA, and infrastructure management to an AI company.

DOOR3

A New York consultancy rated 4.9 across 47 reviews, with most of its project history concentrated in New York City. Work divides between custom software development, AI consulting, and UX/UI design. Recent projects include a database migration from an Access engine to SQL for a software company. Construction, financial services, and nonprofit clients feature heavily in its portfolio.

Iron Forge Development

Rated 4.8 from 21 reviews, serving New York with engagements in custom software, AR/VR, blockchain, ERP, and enterprise app modernization. Recent work covers UI/UX audits and custom React application development. Clients describe the team as flexible and strategic on complex builds handled with minimal input.

MetaProject

Rated 5.0 across 16 reviews, four of them submitted in the past six months. The firm handles full-cycle custom software, mobile, and web development, including UX/UI design and front- and back-end work in Next.js and React for an AI software company. Clients cite a business-first approach to scoping and consistent on-time delivery.

Bit by Bit Computer Consultants

A New York firm rated 4.9 from 54 reviews, pairing managed IT services with custom software development and cybersecurity. Recent work includes a financial services migration covering hardware procurement, switch configuration, and VPN setup. Legal, education, automotive, and nonprofit clients make up much of its history.

Troy Web Consulting

A Cohoes, New York consultancy rated 4.9 from 17 reviews, six of them submitted in the past six months and all rated five stars. Work covers custom software, web and mobile development, and UX/UI design, including an RDBMS platform with a field inspection system built for a nonprofit organization. Education, medical, insurance, and energy clients appear across its reviews.

FocusReactive

Based on Lexington Avenue in New York, rated 4.9 from 25 reviews, with work delivered in 11 countries. The team focuses on web development, custom software, and e-commerce, including a SaaS CMS product built with JavaScript components for a digital marketing company. A recent client credited the team with a modern backend and faster site performance.

American companies make up the largest share of Cleveroad's portfolio, ranging from funded startups to midmarket and enterprise organizations. Recent U.S. work includes a web platform for a STEM education provider reaching more than 500,000 students across over 1,000 schools and 150 districts, and Flutter development support for a web and app agency with roughly 1,600 completed projects. Education, financial services, insurance, medical, and eCommerce account for most engagements.

"New York buyers compare development partners against a dense local market, so placement here says something specific about delivery," said Ivan Stepankov, Head of Growth & Partnerships at Cleveroad. "Every input to this ranking comes from clients who agreed to be interviewed about work we actually shipped."

The placement adds to Cleveroad's record of Clutch recognition across service categories and geographies. In Q1 2026, the company was named one of the top five custom software development firms in the United States with an Ability to Deliver score of 40 out of 40, and in April it entered the top five healthcare app developers in the U.S. directory.
