Experienced Food & Beverage Professional Drives Guest Experience Excellence, Team Development, and High-Volume Resort Operations in Colorado

Brianna Miller is an accomplished hospitality professional who recently joined a Resort & Convention Center property in Aurora, Colorado. She brings extensive experience managing restaurants and large-scale food and beverage operations across resorts and convention properties, with a consistent record of delivering elevated guest experiences while leading high-performing teams in fast-paced environments.

Brianna's professional philosophy centers on "making memories," a guiding principle that shapes her approach to hospitality leadership. She focuses on designing meaningful guest experiences while developing teams capable of delivering consistent, high-quality service. Her leadership style emphasizes honesty, approachability, courage, and professionalism, values she integrates into daily operations and long-term team development.

Her career in hospitality began in her grandmother's small-town catering business, where she first learned the importance of service, attention to detail, and community connection. She later gained early operational experience in fast food before relocating to Denver to pursue higher education and expand her career in hospitality management.

Brianna went on to build a strong foundation in fine dining and high-end service at the University Club of Denver, where she worked in white-glove banquets and upscale dining operations. Her experience spans private restaurants, bars, hotels, and resorts, including seasonal roles at Snowmass Club and Limelight/SkiCo, where she further developed her expertise in high-volume, guest-focused environments.

Over the course of her career, she has successfully led the relaunch of convention and outlet operations, managed banquet and restaurant teams, and overseen food and beverage departments in large-scale hospitality settings. Most recently, she served as Food and Beverage Manager at Embassy Suites Denver Downtown, where she strengthened operational performance and enhanced guest satisfaction across multiple outlets.

Brieanna holds a Bachelor of Science in Food and Health Sciences from Metropolitan State University of Denver and an Associate's Degree in General Studies from the Community College of Denver. She also maintains ServSafe Food Protection Manager Instructor and Proctor certifications and is currently pursuing her CP-FS certification. In addition, she is an active member of the National Environmental Health Association and has previously served on the Emerging Leaders Council with the Colorado Hotel and Lodging Association.

For young women entering the hospitality industry, Brieanna encourages a mindset of continuous learning and adaptability. She advises professionals to be open to taking on roles that may initially feel outside their comfort zone, noting that these experiences often provide the most valuable lessons and long-term career growth opportunities.

She also recognizes the ongoing challenges facing the hospitality sector, including workforce constraints driven by rising labor costs and economic pressures impacting meetings and events. Despite these challenges, she sees significant opportunity in strengthening client relationships and building lasting partnerships through personalized service, and operational excellence.

Brieanna believes that these core values are essential not only for navigating industry pressures but also for fostering loyalty, collaboration, and memorable guest experiences. By prioritizing authenticity and connection, she continues to create environments where both employees and guests feel valued and supported.

Honesty, trust, and meaningful relationships remain the foundation of Brieanna's professional and personal life. She approaches every interaction with integrity and a commitment to open communication, ensuring that her leadership style builds respect and encourages collaboration across teams and stakeholders.

Brieanna Miller continues to make a meaningful impact in the hospitality industry, driving operational excellence, strengthening team culture, and delivering memorable guest experiences that reflect her commitment to service and leadership.
