The companies are developing a coordinated operating model intended to help property owners move more efficiently from an initial construction inquiry through site evaluation, estimating, trade coordination, material procurement, project scheduling, construction and final completion.

“Construction customers should not have to restart the process every time a project moves from land clearing to concrete, framing, insulation or finish work,” said Erik Avery of General Contractor Near Me. “We are building a connected construction system that helps the customer, contractor, subcontractors and suppliers work from the same project journey.”

Expanding From Fredericksburg Into Major Central Texas Markets

The construction network began with a strong focus on Fredericksburg and the surrounding Hill Country and is expanding its estimating, contractor coordination and project-development footprint across Central Texas.

Priority metropolitan and growth markets include:

Austin, San Antonio, Round Rock, Georgetown, Cedar Park, Leander, Pflugerville, Kyle, Buda, San Marcos and New Braunfels.

Texas Hill Country coverage includes project opportunities in and around:

Fredericksburg, Kerrville, Boerne, Comfort, Center Point, Bandera, Blanco, Johnson City, Marble

- Spray foam roofing and roof recoating
- Soundproofing and air-sealing applications

Its current service structure includes residential, commercial, industrial, agricultural, specialty, retrofit and roofing applications, with city-specific coverage already developed for numerous Hill

Country markets.

AI Agents Are Being Built Around the Construction Workflow

The network is developing an agentic construction operating system rather than relying on a single general-purpose chatbot.

Specialized AI agents can be assigned to functions such as:

- Customer intake and project qualification
- Scope-of-work development
- Estimate preparation and follow-up
- Site-visit scheduling
- Contractor and subcontractor matching
- Trade onboarding and document collection
- Material and equipment coordination
- Change-order tracking
- Permit and inspection checklists
- Daily project updates
- Job-site photo organization
- Invoice and payment-status tracking
- Customer questions and communication
- Warranty and post-project follow-up

Each agent can operate through a controlled harness containing approved tools, integrations, business rules, skills, project files and access permissions.

Persistent memory files help retain relevant project context. Role and behavioral instruction files—sometimes referred to internally as “soul files”—define how an agent should communicate, what responsibilities it has and where human approval is required.

These systems can connect with mobile applications, CRM platforms, estimating tools, calendars, messaging systems, cloud storage, accounting software, dispatch tools and proprietary construction applications.

Human project managers remain responsible for final estimates, contracts, safety decisions, trade selection, construction quality, permitting, compliance and material project changes.

Supporting Local Jobs and the Central Texas Construction Economy

Texas construction employment reached approximately 933,000 workers in June 2026, underscoring the size and economic importance of the state’s construction sector.

As the network expands, projects can create and support work for:

General laborers and equipment operators
Carpenters, framers and welders
Concrete and foundation crews
Electricians and plumbers
Roofers, insulators and drywall installers
Painters, flooring installers and finish carpenters
Architects, engineers and designers
Surveyors and permitting professionals
Project managers and estimators
Trucking, hauling and disposal companies
Equipment rental and repair businesses
Fuel, gravel, concrete, steel and lumber suppliers
Local hardware, material and specialty vendors

Austin Flooring Company Expands the AI-Enabled Construction Network

The group has also launched AustinFlooring.Company, a specialized residential and commercial flooring division serving Austin, Round Rock, Cedar Park, Georgetown, Pflugerville, Bee Cave, Lakeway, Buda, San Marcos, Bastrop, Manor, Taylor and surrounding Central Texas communities. Austin Flooring Company is applying the network's AI agents, customer-journey automation, estimating workflows, project-memory systems and contractor-coordination tools to streamline quote requests, material selection, scheduling, documentation, follow-up and installation management. The company supports major flooring investments including whole-home floor replacement, commercial flooring installation, builder and new-construction flooring, multifamily and rental-property turns, luxury vinyl plank installation, hardwood and engineered wood flooring, tile and natural stone, carpet, laminate, floor demolition, concrete-slab and subfloor preparation, moisture-related repairs, transitions and finish work. This expansion gives homeowners, property managers, builders and businesses a local resource when searching for an Austin flooring company, commercial flooring contractor, LVP installer, hardwood flooring contractor, tile installer, flooring replacement company or flooring repair service near them, while using technology to deliver faster communication, clearer scopes and more coordinated project execution.

The model is designed to onboard qualified subcontractors, tradespeople, suppliers, service companies and equipment partners as project demand grows.

AI is intended to reduce administrative waste—not eliminate skilled trade work—by helping crews receive clearer scopes, faster answers, better schedules and more complete project information.

DIQSEO, CybrSpc.ai and SYMPL LABS Support the Transformation

Three affiliated companies support the construction network's marketing, software and AI infrastructure.

DIQSEO.com provides digital marketing, branding, website development, content strategy, local SEO, technical SEO, lead generation, paid advertising, conversion rate optimization and customer acquisition.

Its work also supports SEO, GEO, AEO, SGE and AI-search visibility, helping customers discover relevant services when searching for a general contractor, land clearing company, custom home builder, metal building contractor or spray foam insulation installer in a specific city. DIQSEO publicly lists SEO, web development, automation, CRM development, analytics, paid media and content marketing among its services.

CybrSpc.ai provides custom software, mobile application development, custom AI solutions, managed technology services, CRM and customer journey automation, systems integration and strategic technical staffing.

SYMPL LABS develops the AI execution layer, including specialized agents, agent harnesses, reusable skills, memory systems, role files, LLM integrations, workflow orchestration and connections to proprietary construction tools.

Together, the companies are working to reduce customer acquisition costs, improve response speed, cut duplicated administrative work and help construction teams manage more projects without sacrificing oversight.

The affiliated companies also provide donated and in-kind marketing and technology support to Avery Ridge Ranch, helping the ranch direct more of its resources toward property operations and no-kill care for livestock, birds and exotic animals.
