Introduces AI-Assisted Family Matching to Help Sustain No-Kill Animal Care at Avery Ridge Ranch

Rhodesian Ridgebacks of Texas is expanding its technology-enabled puppy-placement program as 2026 families meet ranch-raised puppies, explore the Texas Hill Country and help support exotic animals, livestock and birds living at Avery Ridge Ranch.

Rhodesian Ridgebacks of Texas has announced the next stage of its technology-enabled breeding and family-matching program, combining human breeder oversight with mobile tools, automated communication and specialized AI agents designed to help connect Rhodesian Ridgeback puppies with prepared, loving homes.

The program operates through roughly 31-acre Texas Hill Country property near Fredericksburg. The ranch provides lodging, animal experiences and no-kill sanctuary and rehoming care for livestock, birds and selected exotic animals.

Rhodesian Ridgebacks of Texas is currently accepting inquiries for its 2026 Rhodesian Ridgeback puppy program, with online puppy information, reservation forms and scheduled meet-and-greet options available through the breeder’s website. The current program emphasizes health, temperament, early socialization and matching each puppy with an appropriate family rather than treating puppy placement as a basic online transaction.

“We are not trying to automate the human responsibility involved in placing a puppy,” said Erik Avery of Rhodesian Ridgebacks of Texas and Avery Ridge Ranch. “We are using technology to organize information, answer questions faster and understand what a family is actually looking for. The final decision still requires real conversations, breeder judgment and a commitment to the dog for its lifetime.”

The breeder's current pricing information describes a $1,000 transferable, nonrefundable deposit applied to a selected puppy, with payment-plan discussions available. It also states that the breeder will take back a dog or puppy when necessary and remains available for owner support. Prospective families should review the complete contract, health documentation, registration terms and deposit conditions before making a commitment.

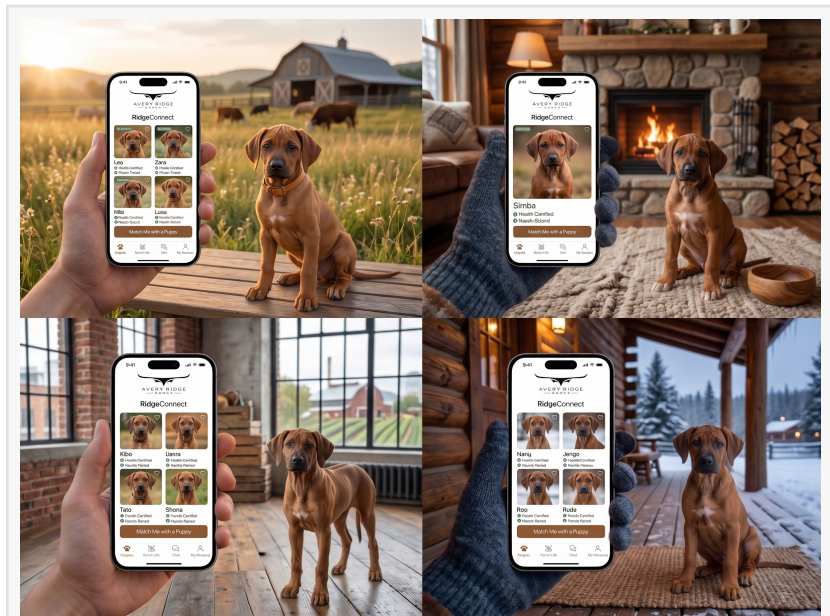

Technology Helps Families Make a Better Long-Term Decision

Rhodesian Ridgebacks of Texas began adopting digital puppy-placement tools years before generative AI became widely available.

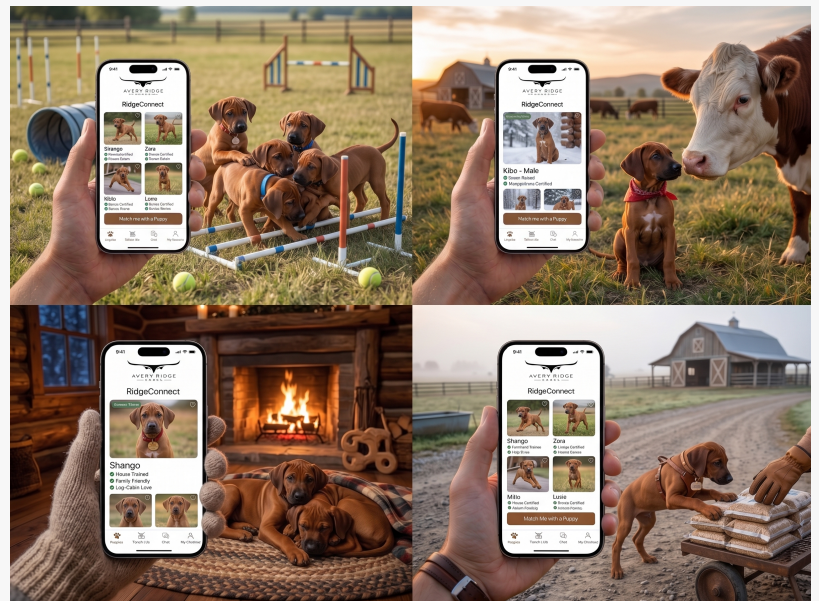

In 2021, the breeder publicly introduced mobile-app access, SMS automation, online communities, puppy profiles and live-camera concepts to help families learn about available puppies and interact with the breeder when in-person travel was more difficult.

The 2026 program advances that model by introducing specialized AI agents and automated workflows that can support:

- * Initial family inquiries
- * Puppy availability updates
- * Meet-and-greet scheduling
- * Family and lifestyle questionnaires
- * Breed education
- * Puppy profile organization
- * Video and image delivery

- * Deposit and reservation reminders
- * Document collection
- * Training and preparation resources
- * Follow-up communication
- * Long-term owner support
- * Community and playdate coordination

The system can use approved skills, memory files, role instructions, business rules and software integrations to provide more consistent information across the customer journey. AI agents may help organize whether a family has children, other animals, sufficient space, previous large-dog experience, training plans and the time required for an athletic and intelligent breed. AI does not independently approve families or assign puppies. Human breeder review remains central to every placement.

Breed Education Comes Before the Sale

Rhodesian Ridgebacks are strong, athletic hounds known for their distinctive ridge, endurance and devoted temperament. The American Kennel Club describes the breed as affectionate with family, dignified and generally reserved with strangers. The breed's strength and independence also make early socialization, consistent training, appropriate exercise and responsible supervision important.

The Rhodesian Ridgeback Club of the United States recommends conscientious breeding decisions that consider genetic health, physical soundness, temperament and conformity to the breed standard. The organization also recommends health screening and full disclosure of relevant results to prospective puppy buyers. For that reason, Rhodesian Ridgebacks of Texas encourages potential owners to learn about the breed before reserving a puppy.

A Ridgeback can be an excellent companion for the right household, but it is not automatically the right breed for every family. Prospective owners should consider fencing, training, exercise, travel, veterinary expenses, household activity and their ability to care for a large dog throughout its lifetime.

A Puppy Program That Helps Sustain Other Animals

The Rhodesian Ridgeback program is part of a wider micro-economy operating at Avery Ridge Ranch.

The ranch provides care, ethical rehoming and sanctuary support for animals that include Texas Longhorns, Nigerian Dwarf goats, Indian blackbuck, peacocks, guinea hens, African geese, ducks, ornamental chickens and ranch cats.

Avery Ridge Ranch publicly describes its work as a combination of animal care, ethical sales, livestock and exotic-animal rehoming, family visits, petting-zoo experiences and no-kill sanctuary support.

According to the ranch, a portion of revenue generated through the Rhodesian Ridgeback program is reinvested into:

- * Animal feed and veterinary needs
- * Fencing and habitat maintenance
- * Water and shelter infrastructure
- * Ranch labor and property upkeep
- * Rehoming and long-term animal care
- * Guest and animal-interaction areas
- * Continued no-kill sanctuary operations

The model creates a circular benefit. Puppies grow up with space and daily human interaction, prepared families receive a carefully considered companion, and the resulting revenue helps the ranch continue caring for animals whose ongoing costs might otherwise make sanctuary care economically unsustainable.

Meet-and-Greets Become a Texas Hill Country Experience

Families interested in a Rhodesian Ridgeback can request a scheduled meet-and-greet through: <https://rhodesianridgebacks.dog/>

Instead of meeting a puppy in a disconnected commercial environment, visitors can see the ranch, experience the conditions where the puppies are raised and discuss the breed directly with the breeder.

Out-of-town families may also coordinate a stay through:

<https://bedandbreakfastfredericksburgtexas.com/>

The pet-friendly accommodations are located at Avery Ridge Ranch and provide access to outdoor space, ranch animals and the Fredericksburg area. The lodging operation markets stays for couples, families, pet owners and travelers visiting wineries, Main Street, Enchanted Rock and other Texas Hill Country attractions.

This creates an eco-tourism and animal-education component around the puppy-selection process. Families can spend time on the property, learn about the breed, meet ranch animals and avoid making a major decision after only viewing online photographs.

Transportation Support for Selected Family Visits

LimoHive.com can help coordinate transportation for selected puppy meet-and-greets, ranch visits and Fredericksburg travel.

Depending on location, provider availability and program terms, complimentary or discounted transportation may be arranged for qualifying visits. Available categories can include sedans, SUVs, black cars, Sprinter vans, limousines and group vehicles.

LimoHive is a transportation booking platform that allows customers to submit trip information once and receive options from multiple transportation providers. The platform supports more than 20 vehicle categories, dispatch-system integrations and human account-manager assistance.

Transportation requests are subject to availability, distance, provider participation and final booking terms.

Ranch Apparel Creates Another Way to Participate

Families, former puppy owners and supporters can also purchase ranch-inspired and animal-themed merchandise through:

<https://www.averyridgeranchapparel.com/>

The store includes Texas, ranch, faith and animal-inspired clothing, hats, children's apparel, drinkware and home products. Purchases help extend awareness of the Avery Ridge Ranch ecosystem and provide an additional revenue channel connected to ranch operations.
