The initiative is intended to address a simple challenge facing modern entertainment businesses: customers frequently move between Google, maps, social media, websites, phone calls, online forms and AI assistants before they ever walk through the door.

Rush Maxx and Rush Fun Park are beginning to connect more of those customer touchpoints into a streamlined digital journey.

The phased program may include technology supporting:

- Attraction and location discovery
- Birthday-party inquiries
- Ticket and pass information
- Promotion and coupon-code questions
- Party-package comparisons
- Online lead capture
- Reservation reminders
- Waiver reminders
- School and group-event inquiries
- Customer-service triage
- Follow-up on incomplete inquiries
- Review and reputation requests
- Marketing attribution
- Internal reporting and analytics

The objective is to use automation for repetitive administrative work while keeping employees involved where guests need personal assistance, party planning or location-specific information.

Rush Maxx already allows visitors to explore attractions, pricing and party options online, while its San Antonio facility offers multi-attraction entertainment including bowling, arcade games, go-karts, laser tag and active-play experiences. naturally serve searches such as indoor playground San Antonio, trampoline park San Antonio, rainy day activities for kids in San Antonio, kids activities near me, family fun center San Antonio, and San Antonio birthday party packages.

Rush Fun Park also operates in Universal City, Texas, creating an option for families searching for things to do with kids in Universal City, indoor birthday parties near Universal City, trampoline parks near Universal City or indoor entertainment in the northeast San Antonio area.

Arizona Locations Support Phoenix, Peoria and Chandler Families

Rush Fun Park's Arizona footprint gives the brand additional relevance to families looking for indoor entertainment in the Phoenix metropolitan area.

The Phoenix Rush Fun Park operates at 3865 E. Thomas Road and offers indoor attractions and dedicated birthday-party contact options.

For Arizona families, the park naturally addresses searches such as things to do with kids in Phoenix, indoor playground Phoenix, Phoenix birthday party venues, trampoline park Phoenix, indoor family activities Phoenix, and kids birthday parties in Phoenix.

Rush Fun Park also serves Peoria, Arizona, where the company promotes family entertainment, admission-based activities and birthday-party packages.

Rush Xtreme in Chandler, Arizona provides another active-entertainment option and currently markets all-access play and specialized attractions such as its Sky Walk experience.

That supports consumer searches including things to do with kids in Chandler, indoor activities Chandler AZ, Chandler birthday party venue, trampoline park Chandler, kids activities Peoria AZ, and indoor birthday parties in Peoria.

AI Is Being Introduced as an Operational Tool, Not a Replacement for Employees

The companies' developing AI strategy is intended to assist staff rather than represent that an autonomous system is already operating every aspect of the parks. Potential applications include AI-assisted customer inquiry classification, automated party follow-up, promotion matching, internal knowledge retrieval, customer-journey analytics and routing questions to the appropriate employee or location.

The project may also test specialized AI agents operating within controlled software environments. Modern agent harnesses can connect AI models with authorized tools, memory, state and execution systems, allowing an agent to perform defined tasks rather than functioning only as a chatbot.

For Rush, the practical objective is straightforward: reduce repetitive steps for employees and guests while improving consistency across locations.

Management plans to evaluate whether these efficiencies can ultimately help support faster service, better party coordination, more effective marketing, improved operating visibility and continued reinvestment in attractions and guest experiences.

As part of the initiative, the companies have also announced promo code "RSVP" for eligible purchases at participating locations and through applicable online checkout experiences.

The Rush Maxx Promo Code is “RSVP” for eligible Rush Maxx tickets, passes, birthday parties, group entertainment and participating promotions. The Rush Fun Park Promo Code is “RSVP” for eligible admissions, parties and participating offers. Customers searching for a Rush Maxx Coupon Code or Rush Fun Park Coupon Code can also try “RSVP” during eligible online checkout or ask a park team member whether the promotion applies to an in-person purchase.

Those are objectives of the initiative, not guaranteed outcomes.

Technology Supporting the Initiative

Three technology and marketing partners are contributing to the developing strategy.

DIQSEO.com is supporting digital marketing, website strategy, search visibility, content development, conversion optimization and AI-assisted marketing automation.

DIQ SEO describes its services as including digital marketing, web development, local and national SEO strategy and AI automation designed to connect existing digital processes and reduce repetitive work.

The search strategy also considers the rapidly evolving ways consumers discover local businesses through traditional search, maps and AI-generated answers. Content is being structured around real customer needs—such as finding a birthday party venue, indoor playground, arcade, go-kart track or family activity in a particular city—rather than simply repeating generic keywords.

CybrSpc.ai is being used as a technology-development resource for areas including custom software, mobile applications, custom AI solutions, managed technology services, system integrations, CRM and customer-journey automation, according to the project team.

SYMPL LABS is supporting development concepts involving AI agents, agent harnesses, reusable skills, memory systems, LLM integrations, workflow automation and connections between proprietary and third-party software tools, according to the project team.

The longer-term goal is to create a technology layer that can connect customer discovery, marketing, inquiries, reservations and operational information without forcing staff or customers to repeatedly move information between disconnected platforms.

Separately, the technology partners also contribute selected donated or in-kind services to Avery Ridge Ranch and its animal-care initiatives.
