Market Size and Growth Outlook for Dental Adhesives and Sealants

The market for dental adhesives and sealants has shown impressive growth recently and is projected to expand from $6.47 billion in 2025 to $7.13 billion in 2026, reflecting a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 10.2%. This upward trend is attributed to factors such as the increasing occurrence of dental caries, wider adoption of preventive dentistry, growth in restorative dental treatments, innovations in polymer chemistry, and greater access to dental care services. Looking ahead, the market is expected to continue its strong performance, reaching $10.44 billion by 2030 with a CAGR of 10.0%. This growth will be fueled by growing demand for bioactive and fluoride-releasing materials, heightened focus on cosmetic dentistry, expansion of minimally invasive treatments, increased uptake of advanced adhesive technologies, and a stronger emphasis on oral preventive care.

Understanding Dental Adhesives and Sealants and Their Role

Dental adhesives and sealants are materials applied to the surface of teeth to strengthen them, prevent decay, and improve their appearance. They serve as crucial elements in modern preventive and restorative dentistry, helping to protect oral health, reduce the risk of cavities, and prolong the durability of dental restorations. Their importance continues to grow as dental care evolves toward less invasive and more effective treatment solutions.

Rising Number of Dental Clinics and Practitioners Supporting Market Expansion

One significant factor driving growth in the dental adhesives and sealants market is the increasing number of dental clinics and healthcare professionals. Dental practitioners utilize these materials to prevent tooth decay, enhance overall oral health, and minimize the need for more invasive procedures later on. For example, in October 2024, the Australian Institute of Health and Welfare reported that in 2022–23, there were approximately 87,400 hospitalizations related to dental conditions that could have been avoided with timely intervention. Among these, children aged 5 to 9 years experienced the highest rate of preventable hospitalizations, at 12.3 per 1,000 population. This underscores the critical role of preventive dental care and supports ongoing market growth.
