power, cooling, connectivity and the skilled workforce, which has rapidly become as fundamental to modern life as traditional public utilities. DCAC USA 2026 brings together the industry's builders, operators, engineers, investors and innovators to advance the technologies and partnerships driving resilient, mission-critical infrastructure.

For more than 70 years, Avtron Power Solutions has been a global leader in load bank manufacturing, delivering precision-engineered power test solutions trusted worldwide. Its extensive portfolio of portable, multi-megawatt, resistive, inductive, combined, medium-voltage and liquid-cooled load banks helps ensure mission-critical electrical systems perform when reliability matters most. Together with Legrand, a global specialist in electrical and digital building infrastructures, the companies help connect, test and protect the resilient electrical backbone that enables the Fifth Utility, from AI and cloud computing to healthcare, finance, manufacturing and national security.

"Avtron Power Solutions and Legrand represent the engineering expertise, innovation and long-term commitment to reliability that our industry depends on, said David Isaac, President of DCAC-Live. "Their sponsorship helps elevate important conversations around resilience, intelligent electrical distribution and the infrastructure powering our digital future."

"Building the Fifth Utility requires more than innovation, it requires trusted partnerships and proven technologies," said Rob Trefz, Vice President of Global Marketing, Avtron Power Solutions and Legrand. "We're proud to support DCAC USA as the industry comes together to share knowledge, challenge assumptions and advance the resilient electrical infrastructure that powers our connected world."
