AI is moving fast, and the journalists, editors, and media leaders covering it need to move faster. The ERAI Fellowship is not a tech course but a leadership programme, equipping senior media professionals with the frameworks, networks, and editorial depth to report on AI with authority. Fellows engage with AI ethics, governance, accountability, and information integrity through expert-led sessions, applied labs, and capstone work grounded in the real questions newsrooms face today.

With two cohorts already launched across a global community of media professionals, ERAI is now preparing its next cohort. At Ai4, attendees can visit the booth to learn what that cohort is

“A trusted AI future cannot be built by technologists alone,” said Sanjay K. Puri, Founder and Chairman of Knowledge Networks and the ERAI Fellowship. “The people who investigate, question, and explain AI to the public shape how the world understands it. ERAI exists to give journalists and media leaders that authority, and Ai4 is exactly where those conversations belong.”

Journalists, editors, media leaders, and anyone invested in how AI is reported are invited to stop by and connect. The ERAI Fellowship can be found throughout Ai4 at Booth 342, Hall BC, 2nd Floor, Venetian Expo.
