For years, Midwesterners seeking high-quality addiction treatment have felt pressure to travel to the East or West Coast for care. Batlin Recovery Center was built to change that, delivering compassionate, evidence-based treatment grounded in practical Midwestern common sense. The Marshall campus provides a welcoming sanctuary from the chaos of addiction, with comfortable bedrooms, quiet spaces for prayer and meditation, a gym with exercise options, and clinicians who specialize in addiction care.

Treatment is built around a whole-person model that addresses body, mind, and spirit. The facility's residential inpatient program offers personalized treatment plans covering alcohol, opioids, fentanyl, methamphetamine, cocaine, prescription drugs, and other substance use disorders. Because recovery is strongest when addiction and mental health are treated together, Batlin's dual diagnosis program provides integrated care for co-occurring conditions like depression, anxiety, and trauma.

Batlin Recovery Center's commitment extends well beyond a client's stay, with aftercare planning, alumni support, referrals, and relapse prevention tools designed to build durable, long-term recovery. Admissions coordinators are available to answer questions, verify insurance coverage, and walk individuals and families through every step of the process.
