KBF Advisory, a leading, specialized professional services firm offering tax, assurance, and advisory services, today announced it has joined Praxity, a global alliance of independent audit, tax, and advisory firms. Membership strengthens KBF's global network, connecting the firm with other trusted firms in more than 110 countries while clients continue working directly with their KBF team.

KBF is a recognized leader in Accounting for Income Tax (ASC 740), GAAP advisory, international tax and transfer pricing. The firm serves hundreds of public, private equity-owned, or venture-backed companies, along with select privately held businesses.

As more businesses expand internationally, clients increasingly need coordinated advisors across multiple jurisdictions. Joining Praxity strengthens KBF's ability to support those organizations wherever they operate.

Scott P. Montopoli, Senior Director of International Tax at KBF, said the alliance gives the firm's tax practice a stronger international foundation:

"We looked closely at most major global alliances before choosing Praxity. Many networks have an impressive map, but Praxity has the right firms in the markets where our clients do business. That difference is everything," Montopoli said. "Praxity gives us the integrated global platform our international tax and transfer pricing leaders relied on for decades. It provides a truly world-class alliance for our partners and staff, along with seamless cross-border support for our clients — from entrepreneurial and mid-market companies to large public and private corporations. We are excited not only to benefit from this collaboration, but to actively contribute to it."

Sam Louis, CEO of Praxity, welcomed KBF's addition to the alliance:

"Welcoming KBF to Praxity feels like a natural and exciting step for our Alliance. They bring not only deep technical expertise, particularly in tax and advisory, but also a mindset that is strongly aligned with how we work together, collaborative, forward-looking, and grounded in long-term relationships," Louis said. "Their presence strengthens our capabilities across the United States, particularly on the West Coast, and enhances how we support clients navigating increasingly complex, cross-border environments. Just as importantly, KBF shares our belief that the strength of an alliance lies in the willingness to contribute, connect, and build something greater together."

KBF's membership in Praxity further strengthens the firm's ability to support clients with complex domestic and international tax, assurance, and advisory needs while maintaining the personalized service KBF is known for.
