Wedding food should do more than simply feed guests. It should create conversation, emotion and memories. Black pizza is playful, elegant and wonderfully unexpected.”

Roberta Sabbatini, Founder of ItalianTouch Events

spotlighting black pizza as an unexpected new food idea for modern destination weddings in Italy. With its dramatic dark dough, vibrant toppings and unmistakably Italian character, black pizza transforms a familiar favourite into a striking visual experience.

Couples are increasingly looking for wedding food that feels personal, memorable and entertaining rather than conventional. Black pizza can be served during a welcome party, an informal wedding aperitivo or a late-night celebration, offering guests something recognisable while still creating an element of surprise.

The concept can be adapted to different wedding styles, from relaxed countryside celebrations to sophisticated evening receptions. Colourful Italian ingredients stand out against the dark base, allowing chefs and caterers to create combinations that are visually theatrical while remaining rooted in Italian food culture.

ItalianTouch Events specialises in curated destination wedding experiences throughout Italy, combining venue selection, planning, styling and food-led ideas. The company works with international couples seeking celebrations that feel unmistakably Italian without relying on predictable wedding formulas.

Through its food and event research, ItalianTouch Events continues to identify regional products, creative serving styles and emerging Italian concepts that can give destination weddings a stronger sense of place.
