

American Special Investigative Group Named 2026 Best of Florida Winner for Private Investigation Firms

Veteran-owned private investigation and private intelligence firm recognized for complex, high-stakes matters in Florida, across the US, and internationally

FORT LAUDERDALE, FL, UNITED STATES, August 7, 2026 /EINPresswire.com/ -- American Special Investigative Group (ASIG), a veteran-owned private investigation and private intelligence firm specializing in complex, high-stakes matters, has been named a 2026 Best of Florida Winner in the Private Investigation Firms category by Guide to Florida.

The recognition reflects ASIG's established presence in Florida while underscoring the firm's broader work on complex investigative matters throughout the United States and internationally.

Founded by nationally recognized private investigator and intelligence professional Toby Braun, ASIG is retained by law firms, corporations, executives, family offices, high-net-worth individuals, private clients, and government organizations when a matter requires discretion, specialized investigative capability, and the ability to operate across jurisdictions.

ASIG's team includes active and former professionals from the U.S. intelligence and law enforcement community, with backgrounds spanning federal investigations, financial crime, intelligence collection and analysis, tactical operations, surveillance, and specialized investigative work. That experience allows the firm to assemble the right resources for each case rather than relying on a one-size-fits-all investigative model.

"Clients come to us when the situation is complex, sensitive, and consequential," Braun said. "Our job is to bring together exceptional investigators, intelligence professionals, and specialized resources, then apply the judgment, discretion, and experience necessary to get the job done. This recognition reflects the caliber of the people behind ASIG and the standard we bring to every engagement."

ASIG focuses on complex investigations and private intelligence rather than routine or high-volume assignments.

The firm handles litigation and pre-litigation investigations, corporate and internal investigations, fraud and financial matters, criminal investigations, asset tracing and hidden-asset investigations, cryptocurrency investigations, cyber investigations, due diligence, insider threat investigations, blackmail and extortion matters, missing persons and difficult locate investigations, surveillance and undercover operations, risk advisory, threat intelligence, executive protection, and international investigations.

Depending on the engagement, ASIG may combine field investigation, intelligence analysis, open-source intelligence, human-source development, surveillance, financial research, records analysis, and specialized investigative disciplines to uncover relevant facts, develop reliable information, identify risks and opportunities, and support effective investigative or strategic action.

The firm is frequently retained for complex, sensitive, or high-stakes investigative matters where experience, discretion, specialized capabilities, and sound investigative judgment are critical.

Law firms and general counsel engage ASIG for litigation support, evidence development, witness and subject investigations, asset intelligence, fraud investigations, due diligence, and sensitive fact-finding. Corporate and private clients retain the firm for matters involving internal misconduct, financial exposure, threats, extortion, sensitive disputes, missing persons, reputational concerns, and other situations requiring discreet investigative support.

ASIG maintains offices in Florida, Texas, and Arizona, including Miami, Fort Lauderdale, Tampa, Boca Raton, Palm. Beach, Dallas, Austin, and Scottsdale, while handling investigative matters throughout the United States and internationally.

The firm's national structure is designed to allow clients to work with one investigative team even when a matter expands beyond a single city or state.

"Complex investigations rarely stay neatly inside one jurisdiction," Braun said. "ASIG was built to follow the facts wherever they lead."

That model has positioned ASIG to handle complex, high-stakes investigative matters requiring specialized expertise, discretion, strategic coordination, and the ability to deploy the right resources wherever necessary, whether the matter is local, national, or international.

For clients facing complex legal, financial, corporate, or private matters, the ability to integrate traditional investigation with intelligence analysis can provide a more complete understanding of the people, relationships, assets, risks, and facts involved.

"Our objective has never been to handle every case," Braun said. "We want to be the firm clients think of when the matter is unusually complex, sensitive, or important."

The 2026 Best of Florida recognition reinforces ASIG's position as a leading private investigator firm in Florida while underscoring the firm's national reach and established role in handling complex, high-stakes investigative matters across the United States and internationally.
