

New Caney ISD Joins Texas School Districts Offering Next Level Prime to Employees and Families

New Caney ISD joins Humble and Willis ISDs in offering Next Level Prime, expanding convenient, no-cost healthcare access for employees and families.

HOUSTON, TX, UNITED STATES, August 6, 2026 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Next Level Medical announced today that New Caney Independent School District will offer Next Level Prime to employees and eligible dependents enrolled in the district's health plan, joining established school district partners Humble ISD and Willis ISD in providing employees and their families with more convenient access to healthcare.

Next Level Medical Operates over 45 Clinics Across Major Texas Cities

Through Next Level Prime, participating employees and covered dependents receive access to primary care, urgent care, preventive care, chronic disease management, health coaching, emotional wellness counseling, care navigation, and 24/7 virtual care through Next Level Medical.

Covered services are available with no copays, deductibles, or surprise bills, helping remove financial and logistical barriers that can make it difficult for working families to access care.

"School district employees spend their careers serving students, families, and their communities," said Juliet Breeze, M.D., founder and CEO of Next Level Medical. "We are proud to welcome New Caney ISD to a growing group of Texas school districts investing in a healthcare benefit that is convenient, meaningful, and designed around the needs of employees and their families."

New Caney ISD's decision builds on the experiences of Humble ISD and Willis ISD, where Next Level Prime has become an established component of each district's employee health strategy.

Humble ISD introduced Next Level Prime in 2024 for approximately 4,500 employees and more than 3,000 covered dependents enrolled in its self-funded medical plan. Approximately 60% of the district's covered population used the benefit during the first year.

During that period, Humble ISD reported $2.3 million in net health plan savings, a 30% reduction in emergency room visits, an 85% reduction in traditional urgent care visits, and a 6% reduction in total medical claims spending. Employee satisfaction remained high, with a Net Promoter Score exceeding 90.

"Next Level Prime is the only healthcare strategy I have implemented that delivered exactly what I expected," said Billy Beattie, Chief Financial Officer of Humble ISD.

Employees have also responded positively to the benefit and the access it provides.

"We have received nothing but positive feedback from our employees," said Liz Jackson, Director of Benefits and Risk Management for Humble ISD. "Next Level Prime shows that the District cares about its employees and represents a truly meaningful investment in our staff and their families."

Willis ISD has also reported increasing financial impact as employees and their families have become more familiar with the benefit. During Year 2 of its partnership, the district generated more than $2.4 million in health plan savings, surpassing its entire first-year savings total with five months still remaining in the plan year. The district maintained an employee Net Promoter Score of 90.

"What we consistently hear from school district leaders is that they want to provide employees with a benefit they will genuinely value and use," Breeze said. "Next Level Prime makes it easier for employees and their families to receive care while giving districts a more proactive approach to managing the health of their populations."

Since launching in 2021, Next Level Prime has grown to serve more than 150,000 members, maintained an average member Net Promoter Score above 90, and achieved a client retention rate exceeding 99%.

As New Caney ISD launches the benefit, Next Level Medical will work closely with the district to introduce the program, educate employees and their families, and help members understand how to access the services available to them.
