Pool Screen Enclosure in Winter Park, FL

Winter Park's outdoor living conditions demand more from a screen enclosure than aesthetics alone. The area's year-round humidity, intense UV exposure, and active summer storm season accelerate wear on unprotected pool decks and patio structures. A properly permitted and installed pool enclosure reduces insect intrusion, limits UV damage to outdoor furnishings, extends the life of pool equipment, and keeps water cleaner between maintenance visits. Orange County requires permitted enclosure work, and L.A. Construction manages the full permitting process on behalf of every client, from initial site review through final inspection sign-off.

Homeowners considering a pool screen enclosure in Winter Park, FL will find that L.A. Construction builds every project using USA-made Phifer screen materials, configured to each property's specific dimensions and HOA requirements. Winter Park's residential communities often carry strict guidelines around exterior improvements, and the company's team works directly with homeowners to prepare the documentation and specifications needed for HOA approval before work begins. Every engagement starts with a free in-home consultation, and the company holds Florida contractor license #SCC131152193 and carries over $1,000,000 in liability and workers' compensation coverage.

Homeowners who want to review the company's full project history, verified customer reviews, and service area coverage before making a decision can find that information through its listing for pool screen enclosure in Winter Park, Florida, where more than 103 five-star reviews from Orange County and the surrounding region reflect the consistent quality and communication clients receive on every job.
