

How Schools Can Plan Digital Halls of Fame With Rocket Alumni Solutions This Summer

Schools are using the final weeks of summer to design interactive recognition displays and bring more community history into view

BOSTON, MA, UNITED STATES, August 7, 2026 /EINPresswire.com/ -- The final weeks of summer give school leaders time to plan digital halls of fame, record boards and other interactive recognition displays. Athletic directors, principals, advancement teams and communications leaders are seeing how peer schools use campus personalization to recognize their communities, then using the quieter summer months for back-to-school planning of digital halls of fame, record boards, and other recognition projects of their own.

Archbishop Hannan High School Recognition Display

Rocket Alumni Solutions provides interactive touchscreen recognition displays to more than 1,500 schools and organizations across 2,000+ installations. Now is the time for school teams to dust off old photos and records, decide which stories deserve the spotlight, and design a "welcome back" experience that will leave returning students and visitors in awe.

School leaders can book a Rocket demo and request a free custom installation mockup to see how an interactive recognition display could fit their space.

Peer Inspiration Becomes a Plan

A peer school's digital hall of fame can give leaders a practical model for combining campus branding with community history. That example gives school leaders a concrete starting point for discussing what belongs on their walls and how more people can be recognized.

Digital displays can extend physical trophy cases without replacing the history they hold. They add space for photographs, biographies, team rosters, videos and academic honors. Staff can also add new material without waiting for another physical case or a redesigned record board.

Archbishop Hannan High School serves as a prime example. Their branded recognition wall seamlessly pairs a Rocket touchscreen with the school's name, crest, alma mater, fight song, and motto. Rather than looking like a disconnected piece of technology, the display feels like an organic extension of the campus. This tailored fit is especially impactful at a school where 90% of students participate in at least one athletic program or extracurricular club, according to Hannan's official campus-life page.

Interactive Recognition Displays That Keep Growing

Rocket Alumni Solutions is a cloud-based interactive recognition platform for schools and organizations. Staff can manage content through a web browser, publish updates and give multiple departments access to contribute. More than 70 premade templates support halls of fame, record boards, academic awards, donor recognition, alumni profiles and other school stories. The platform includes unlimited storage, users and folders.

The platform works with wall-mounted touchscreens, custom recognition walls, enclosures and freestanding kiosks. Weekly software updates and 24/7 support help schools keep the experience current after launch. A display can begin with athletics, for example, then expand as other departments find records, photos and stories to add.

A More Visible Welcome Back!

Summer planning gives leaders the crucial time needed to make deliberate, impactful choices. By acting now, schools can identify their most important stories and decide exactly where an interactive display will leave the biggest impression on day one of the new school year.

The result isn't just a technology upgrade; it's a highly visible, pride-inducing welcome for students, families, alumni, and visitors. The best recognition environments always reflect the school's unique identity, keeping colors, symbols, and traditions front and center. The touchscreen simply unlocks more of the community's history for everyone to explore.

Rocket Alumni Solutions helps schools turn an initial idea into a digital recognition plan they can expand as new stories and records are added.
