Following major expansion, VGA introduces $45 bulk grading for 20+ sealed and/or unopened standard-size games with an estimated 30-day turnaround.

ROSWELL, GA, UNITED STATES, August 8, 2026 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Video Game Authority (VGA), a division of Collectible Grading Authority (CGA), has introduced a new Bulk Tier, giving dealers, retailers, online sellers and collectors a new option for high-volume video game grading.

The Bulk Tier allows customers to submit 20 or more sealed and/or unopened standard-size video games for $45 per item with an estimated 30-day turnaround.

The program follows a significant period of investment and expansion at CGA. Over the past year, the company has more than doubled its staff and invested in innovative technology, specialized equipment, expanded production capabilities and improved operational processes designed to increase grading and encapsulation capacity while maintaining quality and consistency.

“Over the past year, we have made a tremendous investment in the future of VGA and CGA,” said Andrew Aiello, Partner at Collectible Grading Authority. “We’ve more than doubled our staff, invested in innovative technology and new equipment, and improved nearly every part of our operation. We now have the capacity to aggressively pursue higher-volume submissions, and the new VGA Bulk Tier is one of the first major results of that expansion.”

“At $45 per game with an estimated 30-day turnaround, we believe we are delivering an exceptional combination of value, speed and quality,” Aiello added. “Dealers and collectors should have a grading option that makes sense at volume without compromising the standards,

VGA Launches Bulk Tier

case quality or presentation of their collectibles."

The Bulk Tier is specifically designed for sealed and/or unopened standard-size video games. Games submitted through the program receive the same VGA grading standards and premium display cases as other VGA submissions.

VGA believes it offers the strongest video game grading system in the industry, incorporating both the box and seal grades into the overall grade and backed by a diverse grading team with extensive experience across vintage and modern, domestic and international video game releases.

"VGA has earned the trust of serious collectors by maintaining rigorous grading standards and never losing sight of the quality of the final product," said Tom Derby, Partner at Collectible Grading Authority. "As we grow, maintaining those standards remains our highest priority."

That history and emphasis on consistent grading standards have helped VGA-graded games establish a strong presence in the collector market, with notable results and strong prices realized through major auctions and private sales.

Customers can choose between VGA's Standard 100-Point Scale and Unified 10-Point Scale for Bulk Tier submissions.

"We're not interested in competing on price alone," Aiello said. "We're investing in the people, technology, equipment and processes behind the product. Collectors care about the grade, but they also care about the quality of the case, how their collectible presents and the confidence they have in the company standing behind it. We believe VGA is exceptionally strong in all of those areas."

VGA grading, authentication and encapsulation are performed at CGA's facility in Roswell, Georgia, with premium cases hand-crafted on site.
