

Rabbu Launches First AI Property Search Built for Short-Term Rental Investing

The free nationwide tool learns an investor's buy box and returns real properties with revenue and returns already calculated.

CHARLOTTE, NC, UNITED STATES, August 12, 2026 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Rabbu, the marketplace for short-term rental investors, today launched Rabbu AI Property Search, a conversational AI concierge that finds and evaluates short-term rental properties on an investor's behalf across markets nationwide.

Instead of searching listings market by market, investors describe what they are looking for in plain language. The concierge learns their buy box, searches Rabbu's inventory nationwide, and returns a shortlist of real properties with projected revenue, gross yield, and returns already calculated. It is free and requires no signup.

It does the job a knowledgeable real estate agent would do on your behalf, covering the entire country, before handing you off to a local agent for the on-the-ground detail.”

Emir Dukic, CEO and Co-Founder, Rabbu

The tool runs on Rabbu's short-term rental performance data, including forward-looking revenue projections and, on owner-listed properties, verified historical operating financials. Properties are judged on what they can earn, not just list price.

"It does the job a knowledgeable real estate agent would do on your behalf, covering the entire country, before handing you off to a local agent for the on-the-ground detail," said Emir Dukic, CEO and co-founder of Rabbu.

"This is how we search for properties now, and we think it is where property search is heading."

Rabbu positions the tool as complementary to agents rather than a replacement. The concierge handles discovery and evaluation at national scale, and short-term rental specialized agents help investors tour, negotiate, and close.

Rabbu AI Property Search is available now at rabbu.com/chats.
