

Working Class Documentary Spotlights Financial Education and Economic Mobility in the Lehigh Valley

Filmed at Raub Middle School, the documentary explores how financial literacy can shape confidence, choices, and future opportunities.

ALLENTOWN, PA, UNITED STATES, August 10, 2026 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Working Class, a new documentary filmed at Raub Middle School in Allentown, explores how financial education can shape the lives of students, families, and educators. Through personal stories and practical lessons, the film shows how access to financial knowledge can open pathways to greater economic mobility.

The documentary follows a semester inside the school's Financial Literacy Program. It captures the everyday experiences of people learning how money works and what that knowledge can mean for their choices, confidence, and future.

The film was made possible through the work of community partners, with First Commonwealth Federal Credit Union serving as a lead underwriter and financial literacy partner. First Commonwealth has supported financial education initiatives in the Allentown School District for several years, helping bring practical money-management skills and resources into the classroom.

"The stories featured in Working Class remind us that financial literacy is about much more than dollars and cents. It's about confidence, opportunity, and creating brighter futures," said Donna LoStocco, President & CEO of First Commonwealth Federal Credit Union. "We're honored to support this project and the students, educators, and families whose experiences are inspiring this important conversation."

Working Class is intended to support continued conversations about financial literacy, educational equity, and economic opportunity. The film is expected to be shared through screenings, educational events, and community partnerships across the region.

To watch the documentary, visit WorkingClassMovie.com.

About Working Class

Working Class explores the power of financial education through the lives of students, families, and educators at Raub Middle School in Allentown, Pennsylvania. By sharing real experiences and the work of community partners, the film shows how financial literacy can create greater opportunity and support long-term economic mobility.

About First Commonwealth Federal Credit Union

First Commonwealth, headquartered in Allentown, Pennsylvania, is a regional credit union providing personal, business, and digital banking services to members in Pennsylvania and New Jersey. With 14 locations, it serves more than 98,000 members and 2,400 businesses. Since 1959, First Commonwealth has helped individuals, families, and communities strengthen their financial lives through banking services, education, and community partnerships.

Luis Soto

First Commonwealth Federal Credit Union

lsoto@firstcomcu.org

This press release can be viewed online at: <https://www.einpresswire.com/article/933172936>

EIN Presswire's priority is source transparency. We do not allow opaque clients, and our editors try to be careful about weeding out false and misleading content. As a user, if you see something we have missed, please do bring it to our attention. Your help is welcome. EIN Presswire, Everyone's Internet News Presswire™, tries to define some of the boundaries that are reasonable in today's world. Please see our Editorial Guidelines for more information.

© 1995-2026 Newsmatics Inc. All Right Reserved.