

Astrix Acquires MAIN5 to Expand Global Life Sciences Consulting and Digital Transformation Capabilities

The acquisition strengthens Astrix's position as a premier global provider of pharmaceutical technology services while expanding its European footprint.

RED BANK, PA, UNITED STATES, August 13, 2026

/EINPresswire.com/ -- Astrix, the leading provider of pharmaceutical technology services, today announced the acquisition of MAIN5, a Germany-based consulting firm specializing in digital transformation, regulatory affairs, quality management, and operational excellence for life science organizations.

The acquisition brings together two organizations with complementary capabilities and a shared commitment to helping life sciences companies accelerate innovation, modernize operations, and navigate an increasingly complex regulatory landscape. MAIN5 has established a strong reputation across Europe for delivering strategic consulting and digital transformation services to leading life science companies, with extensive expertise in regulatory operations, quality, and business process excellence.

By combining MAIN5's deep European consulting expertise with Astrix's market-leading pharmaceutical technology services, clients will benefit from expanded advisory services in the European market and enhanced support for complex business and digital transformation initiatives.

"Our clients are looking for strategic partners that understand both the science and the technology required to bring life-changing therapies to market," said Dale Curtis, Chief Executive Officer of Astrix. "MAIN5 has built an outstanding reputation for helping life sciences organizations plan for and then transform critical business processes while maintaining the highest regulatory standards. Together, we will deliver even greater value to our clients and the industry as a whole."

Founded in Germany, MAIN5 has supported leading life science organizations through digital transformation initiatives, regulatory strategy, quality management, and operational excellence programs. The firm's experienced consultants serve clients throughout Europe and beyond, helping organizations improve efficiency while meeting evolving regulatory requirements. "Joining Astrix marks an exciting new chapter for MAIN5, our employees, and our clients," said

Tore Bergsteiner, Managing Partner of MAIN5. "From our first conversations, it was clear that our organizations share the same client-first philosophy and passion for solving complex challenges in the life sciences industry. Together, we can offer our clients a broader portfolio of services, deeper technical expertise, and truly global support while preserving the collaborative culture and specialized knowledge that have defined MAIN5."

The acquisition further strengthens Astrix's global presence and reinforces its long-term strategy of investing in specialized scientific expertise that helps life sciences organizations accelerate digital transformation, improve regulatory compliance, and optimize operations.

MAIN5 will continue serving clients under the Astrix organization, ensuring continuity for existing engagements while providing access to additional capabilities and global resources.
