The event will give dog owners an opportunity to explore training and enrichment activities while meeting the Atlanta Dog Trainer team. Attendees can watch live demonstrations featuring agility, scent work, dock diving and obedience training. Trainers will also be available to answer questions about the company's training, boarding, daycare and enrichment programs.

“

We are excited to open the farm to the community and create an event where families can have fun while discovering new ways to engage with their dogs”

“We are excited to open the farm to the community and create an event where families can have fun while discovering new ways to engage with their dogs,” said Shelby Waxer, Owner of Atlanta Dog Trainer. “Whether someone is interested in improving their dog’s behavior or simply looking for an activity they can enjoy together, Dog Days at the Farm will offer something for every dog and owner.”

General admission is free, and guests may arrive at any time during the event. A limited number of $30 tickets will also be available for attendees who want to participate in two mini training sessions. Ticket holders may choose from agility, dock diving and scent work, with one dog permitted per session. Advance registration is recommended because session times are limited.

Dog Days at the Farm will also feature local pet vendors, including Pet Wants and York and Euro, along with two food trucks and music from a local DJ. The event will take place rain or shine at Atlanta Dog Trainer, located at 12900 Freemanville Road in Alpharetta.

Atlanta Dog Trainer has served Atlanta-area dog owners for more than 15 years and has trained over 10,000 dogs. Its programs include Board and Train, behavior modification, puppy training, private lessons, group classes, agility, swimming, and dock diving.
