

MAOZ Launches Nationwide, Giving Families a Trusted Digital Home for Faith-First Entertainment

The New Streaming Platform Built for Families Tired of Algorithms and Ready for Entertainment They Can Trust

SEATTLE, WA, UNITED STATES, August 12, 2026
/EINPresswire.com/ -- Entertainment was once about gathering together, sharing stories, and enjoying meaningful moments. Today, for many families and individuals, it has become something entirely different. Endless scrolling, addictive algorithms, and unpredictable recommendations have made watching a movie or starting a new series feel like a gamble.

MAOZ changes that.

Founded by Mike Cooper and launching nationwide, MAOZ is a faith-first, family-safe streaming platform designed to give families a digital home they know they can trust. It's more than just another streaming service; MAOZ offers a carefully curated collection of films, series, children's programming, documentaries, and original content that reflects faith, family, and timeless values without relying on engagement-driven algorithms.

MAOZ wasn't simply created out of frustration—it was born from a calling.

"Somewhere along the way, society has accepted that protecting homes and families means constantly filtering what comes across screens. Trust shouldn't be a self-imposed guardrail; it should be the foundation of the platforms invited into homes and lives. That is why MAOZ was built."

— Mike Cooper, Founder & Steward, MAOZ

After watching every platform he trusted with his own family gradually prioritize engagement over people, Mike realized something had to change. Despite parental controls, family settings, and promises of safer experiences, inappropriate recommendations, addictive algorithms, and content that conflicted with his family's values continued finding their way onto screens. Rather than accepting that this was simply the future of entertainment, Cooper felt called to build something different, a platform where trust comes before engagement and where families can confidently enjoy entertainment without constantly second-guessing what comes next. Every title on the platform is intentionally curated, allowing families to spend less time filtering content and more time enjoying it together.

The platform is building a trusted digital ecosystem where carefully selected entertainment, faith-aligned creators, and real-world community come together under one roof. MAOZ launches nationwide with streaming available across web, mobile, and connected TV devices, giving families everywhere access to a trusted digital refuge built around faith, safety, and meaningful storytelling.
