businesses while preserving the local brand, leadership and customer relationships that drive their success. As part of the KIG network, MLD will collaborate with other operating companies to share best practices and capabilities while maintaining its local sensibilities and leadership.

“The MLD leadership team has built a consistently successful business and earned a strong reputation for taking care of its customers and employees,” said Jeff Smith, CEO of Kodiak Interiors Group. “MLD is a natural fit with our culture, expanding our portfolio with new product

"We've built MLD over 30 years on relationships – with our customers, our employees and the communities we serve," said Dan Devenport, president of MLD. "Kodiak Interiors Group gives us the ability to continue to grow into new markets without losing what makes us who we are. We're excited about the opportunity ahead."

With this new partnership, MLD's customers, contractors and manufacturer partners will not see a significant change in day-to-day operations. MLD will continue to provide high-end customer service, products available at every price point, and the kind of partnership-driven relationships that the company has prioritized since its founding in 1987. As part of the KIG platform, MLD will have increased backing to support that commitment, with Kodiak Interiors Group's operational resources and strategic expertise to help position MLD for continued growth.

With the addition of MLD, Kodiak Interiors Group now includes six operating companies serving customers across nine states.
