

Letsia Berufsakademie Wien Prepares to Welcome New Vocational Training Groups

The Vienna academy prepares for new trainee groups with programs focused on practical skills, professional readiness, and labor market needs.

VIENNA, VIENNA, AUSTRIA, August 15, 2026 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Letsia Berufsakademie Wien is preparing to welcome new groups of trainees in Vienna as part of its continued development of vocational education and practical skills programs designed to respond to evolving labor market needs.

The academy focuses on creating a stronger connection between professional education and the workplace, with training designed to provide participants with practical skills that can support their transition into professional environments.

The upcoming groups will participate in programs combining theoretical knowledge with practical development, with particular emphasis on professional readiness, technical competencies, workplace skills, and career development.

Mohamed Rabie Moawad, Chairman of Letsia Holding, said:

“Vocational education creates its greatest value when training reflects what the labor market actually needs. Our objective is to build programs that give participants practical skills they can use in real working environments and develop throughout their careers.”

As part of its development strategy, Letsia Berufsakademie Wien is also working to strengthen connections between training and industry, with a focus on creating programs that evolve alongside changing professional requirements.

The academy's activities in Vienna form part of Letsia Holding's broader investment in education and human capital development, alongside the group's activities across technology, entrepreneurship, and digital services.

Letsia believes that vocational education can play an important role in addressing skills gaps by providing focused training pathways that prepare participants for specific professional environments.

Additional information about the upcoming training groups, programs, and enrollment schedules will be announced as preparations progress.
