18, 2026 /EINPresswire.com/ -- As schools across the United States return to session, Bible with Life is pointing families toward an old practice for a familiar moment: sending a child into a new year with a spoken blessing, this time in the form of a song.

You cannot walk them into the building. You can send something that goes with them.”

Benny Yu, Founder of Bible with Life

The platform's personalized Scripture blessing songs let a parent, grandparent, or teacher choose a Bible verse, add a student's name, and share a song written around that passage. Creating and sending the song is free.

The start of a school year is one of the seasons when families most want words and least know which ones to use, particularly for a college freshman leaving home. Bible with Life's encouragement verse list includes passages traditionally used when someone steps into unfamiliar ground: promises of God's presence in a new place, of courage, and of being known by name.

"You cannot walk them into the building," said Benny Yu, founder of Bible with Life. "You can send something that goes with them. A verse sung over a nervous fifteen-year-old, with their own name in it, does something a text message does not."

The platform notes that teachers are frequently on the receiving end as well. Parents and church groups have used the same tool to send blessings to a class teacher at the start of term.

Bible with Life produces animated Bible story films and original worship music alongside the blessing songs. Its library includes 45 Scripture films and 63 original worship tracks, all free to watch and stream, plus a free daily Bible verse email and a 30-day prayer challenge.

Blessing songs for students and teachers can be created at biblewithlife.com/send-a-song.
