Perform, Talk, Relax, Give

MURFREESBORO, TN, UNITED STATES, August 19, 2026 /EINPresswire.com/ -- The infinite ways to discover and consume music often feels overwhelming, exhausting the senses with a deluge of sights and sounds so that all you want to do is close the shutters against the battering noise. At People appreciate authenticity. They feel they are alone because experience has become content. Experience here at The Print Shop is just that: experience. This is a very personal and cathartic event.”

Adam Blank

The Print Shop just outside of Atlanta, GA, it all quiets down to a laser focused spotlight trained on fluid storytelling through song and conversation. The brainchild of BLANK RECORDS Founder Adam Blank, the YouTube concert series Live at the Print Shop is an extension of the label's campaign to pay homage to renown artists while also providing a springboard for breaking new talent such as Stephen Wilson Jr. whose wildly popular performance played a key role in the launch of his career. The monthly sessions not only capture the absolute purity of an artist's music, but it also captures the very essence of the person in a setting where the intricate notes of both “song” and “spirit” are distinctly heard. And it's clear that music fans are listening. The series currently boasts nearly 1 million followers and over 120 million views across the channel's platforms, with hundreds of millions more in an incalculable sea of viral user-generated content. For Adam Blank, this is his own personal record collection coming alive at his house.

Adam Blank describes himself as a serial entrepreneur, and some might say he has the Midas touch trailing a string of successful businesses. A conversation with Blank quickly reveals that his success story has been painstakingly chiseled from the hard rock of his life, beginning with a tumultuous childhood that put him in the driver's seat of his own life at a young age. Exposure to the arts early on proved the hand of fate that would save him, and that abiding influence has permeated every one of his businesses since then including music venues in Buckhead, an antique store, and his current primary business ABC Recycling. What started as a local initiative became an international business as Blank identified and connected with worldwide markets on his recyclable goods through his inaugural business Atlanta Polymyrs. A true pioneer in the field, the process of turning trash into treasure is very like the alchemy of turning emotion into music, a recycling of energy that Blank has come to know well and nurture often.

In 2019, Blank turned his guest house into a print shop slash man cave that continued to evolve in design and functionality. Having several close friends in the music world and an insatiable appetite to create, Blank's initial "hang with friends" atmosphere began to morph into a high-quality audio and visual manifesto, and Live at the Print Shop was born. The multi-camera, live concert and interview series feature stripped-down performances that are as honest and pure as the human-to-human conversations that are interwoven throughout. To the artists, it feels like a peaceful sanctuary lending to unrehearsed story telling that only the truly comfortable can have. But it's not all lights, camera, and action at The Print Shop. It's a full day of family style connection where everyone gathers, eats, talks and enjoys the outdoors. Each artist also chooses a charity which is highlighted in the episode and further supported by Blank through a donation. After each episode airs on the brand's YouTube channel, the live album takes center stage. Blank is a huge enthusiast of vintage media so every performance of Live at the Print Shop is available on vinyl. For likeminded collectors, Blank takes it a step further, giving each performance its own recycling journey by finding new life on the old retro media of 8-track tapes.
