

Dermatology & Mohs Surgery Institute Announces Relocation of Its Charleston Office

The new Woodfall Drive location brings medical, surgical, and cosmetic dermatology—including Mohs surgery—to Charleston-area patients.

CHARLESTON, IL, UNITED STATES, August 18, 2026 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Dermatology & Mohs Surgery Institute Announces Relocation of Its Charleston Office

Our new Charleston location reflects our commitment to making specialized skin cancer care more accessible to patients in this community.”

Jeffrey McKenna, M.D.

The practice's new office at 2128 Woodfall Drive offers patients a modern, comfortable space for medical, surgical, and cosmetic dermatology care.

Dermatology & Mohs Surgery Institute (DMSI) is pleased to announce that its Charleston office has moved to a new location at 2128 Woodfall Drive, Charleston, IL 61920. The practice, previously located at 100 Deerpath Road, began seeing patients at the new office on August 1.

The move allows DMSI to better serve patients throughout Charleston and the surrounding Coles County communities with an updated space designed around comfort and efficient care. Phone numbers, appointments, and patient records remain unchanged, and no action is required from patients.

“Our new Charleston location reflects our commitment to making specialized skin cancer care more accessible to patients in this community. Receiving Mohs surgery close to home, in a comfortable, thoughtfully designed space, can make a stressful experience easier. I'm grateful for the opportunity to continue providing precise, compassionate care centered on each patient's needs,” said Jeffrey McKenna, M.D.

“I'm happy we found a space in Charleston to continue to provide care in this community,” said Valerie Jackson, FNP-C.

The Charleston office provides a full range of dermatology services for patients of all ages, including treatment for acne, eczema, psoriasis, warts, and skin cancer, along with cosmetic offerings such as BOTOX®. The office is also home to Dr. Jeffrey McKenna, a fellowship-trained Mohs surgeon offering Mohs micrographic surgery. DMSI offers same-day and next-day appointments and accepts most major insurance plans, including Medicare.
