

Attorney & Former K-9 Officer Rob Levine Partners with The Hotel for Homeless Dogs to Give Rescue Pups a Second Chance

Rob Levine Gives Back expands its community mission to support homeless pets, driven by Levine's own history as a K-9 officer and lifelong dog lover

WARWICK, RI, UNITED STATES, August 17, 2026 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Rob Levine Law, one of Rhode Island's most recognized personal injury firms, announced today that its community outreach program, Rob Levine Gives Back, is partnering with The Hotel for Homeless Dogs to support homeless and at-risk dogs across Rhode Island.

The partnership is personal for founder Rob Levine. Before he became one of the state's best-known attorneys, Levine served as a police officer with the Central Falls Police Department, where he helped secure the department's first-ever K-9 unit. That hands-on experience working alongside dogs left a lasting impression. Even today, dogs remain part of the Levine family at home.

Our commitment doesn't end with a case. From feeding families and providing backpacks to helping dogs find loving homes, Rob Levine Law is proud to give back to our community.”

Long before I was a lawyer, I was a K-9 officer, and I saw firsthand what these dogs are capable of and how much they give back to the people around them. Dogs have always been part of my family, and I believe every dog deserves a warm bed, a loving home, and someone looking out for them. Supporting The Hotel for Homeless Dogs is a chance to give back to the animals that have given so much to me" said Rob Levine, Founder of Rob Levine Law.

Through this new partnership, Rob Levine Law will use its statewide platform and media reach to raise funds and donations for The Hotel for Homeless Dogs, with a special focus on sponsoring the shelter's longest-staying dogs — the ones too often overlooked by adopters. The firm will also invite the Hotel to its community events to help create more adoption, giving Rhode Island families a chance to meet these dogs in person. Together, these efforts are expected to help dogs find safe shelter and, ultimately, loving homes.

The Hotel for Homeless Dogs is a boutique-style animal welfare organization in Cumberland, Rhode Island, creating safe landings and fresh starts for dogs and kittens in need. Through their hotel-inspired facility and foster network across New England, they provide compassionate care while helping every guest find the loving home they deserve.

"Every partnership like this means more resources, more comfort, and more second chances for the dogs in our care. Rob Levine's own background with K-9 units means he understands, in a way many people don't. We're grateful to have a partner who sees our dogs as family, because that's exactly how we treat them," said Savannah Joseph, Manager of The Hotel for Homeless Dogs.

This partnership adds to a growing list of community initiatives under Rob Levine Gives Back, which already includes an annual Thanksgiving meal drive serving nearly 1,000 Rhode Island families, a backpack giveaway providing school supplies to thousands of local students, a complimentary holiday Safe Ride program, and the Rob Levine Family Fun Fest.
