Nani Media House Launches Advanced Executive Contributor Programme, an Annual Membership for Founders and Leaders Across Its Publications

"Get Me Out" campaign opens membership applications for bylined feature placement across Rich Woman, Sovereign, Rich Monday Paper and the wider NMH network

LONDON, [DATE] — Nani Media House (NMH), the independent media group behind fifteen editorial titles including Rich Woman, Rich Monday Paper,

Sovereign and Rich Travel, today announced the launch of its Executive Contributor Programme, a paid annual membership inviting founders, business leaders and accomplished voices to secure bylined feature placement across its publications.

The programme, publicly branded under the campaign name "Get Me Out," gives members editorial placement across one or more NMH titles over the course of their membership, alongside access to the combined readership of the NMH network. Membership runs on an annual subscription basis, with a limited number of places available.

"Every founder we speak to has a story that never quite finds the stage it deserves," said Marina Nani, Editor-in-Chief and co-founder of Nani Media House. "The Advanced Executive Contributor Programme gives your story a proper home, real editorial placement across our titles, backed by

Dr Monica Garg's Cocktails and Lunch, Mayfair, 20 August

It's the last time you were in a room full of women who were generously the you, chosen and still hungry for more!

For the women stepping into Dr Monica Garg's Cocktails and Lunch in Mayfair on 20 August, that question is really the whole point of the afternoon.

Garg founded NMH, the International Network of Elite Women, on the belief that the right women, sharing everything, built around four words: the keeps coming back to:

Leadership	Access	Influence	Impact
Being around women who understand where the things are going to go, and are generous enough to share their vision.	The gaps that need to be filled, and the conversations that need to happen to get it done.	What happens after lunch with women in conversation? How can we use our influence to create a better world for all?	The reason why it's so important to have women go on to lead together, creating their own space.

"Relationships become capital, conversations become collaborations, and communities become powerful ecosystems for growth."

DR MONICA GARG, CO-FOUNDER, NMH
