

Fire Factory Australia Supplies ActivFire Certified Extinguishers Nationwide

Fire Factory Australia is expanding access to fire safety solutions, supporting businesses nationwide with certified products and reliable supply

GRANVILLE, NEW SOUTH WALES, AUSTRALIA, August 18, 2026 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Fire Factory Australia is strengthening access to certified fire safety solutions by supplying ActivFire certified extinguishers to customers nationwide across Australia.

As an Australian fire equipment manufacturer, Fire Factory Australia offers an extensive range of extinguishers for commercial, industrial, residential, marine, and vehicle applications. Products include ABE dry chemical powder, carbon dioxide, water, foam, wet chemical, and specialised extinguishers for different fire risks.

Fire Factory Australia supplies extinguishers that are certified to applicable Australian Standards and prepared for straightforward installation. Each unit is supplied tagged and with a mounting bracket, helping contractors and facility managers reduce preparation time on site. The range is available for delivery across Australia.

The company's ActivFire certified fire equipment gives contractors, building managers, and purchasing teams greater confidence when selecting products for fire safety projects. Its wider portfolio includes AS/NZS certified fire safety products developed to meet relevant performance, quality, and compliance requirements.

"Certification is more than a mark displayed on a product, because it provides customers with confidence that the equipment has been independently assessed against recognised requirements,” said Peter Kordabadi, Director of Fire Factory Australia. “Our focus is to make compliant fire protection equipment easier to source by supplying extinguishers tagged, bracketed, and ready for efficient installation, while supporting customers with reliable service, competitive pricing, and dependable availability.”

The company also operates as a fire protection equipment wholesaler, with product categories covering extinguishers, fire panels, cables, passive fire products, wet fire equipment, safety signs, hardware, smoke alarms in Australia, and LED emergency lighting in Australia, plus accessories.

Fire Factory Australia supports its product range with recognised industry memberships and certifications. These include ActivFire certification, FM approval, Global Mark certification, Bureau Veritas certification, compliance with applicable Australian and Australian/New Zealand Standards, UL listings for selected products, ISO 9001 quality management credentials, and FPA Australia Gold Membership.

Customers purchasing fire extinguishers for wholesale in Australia can select products for common Class A, B, E, and F fire risks, depending on the extinguishing agent and intended application. Correct equipment selection, installation, signage, inspection, and ongoing servicing remain essential parts of an effective fire protection program.

“Fire protection professionals need equipment that is compliant, accessible, and practical to deploy across projects of different sizes,” Kordabadi added. “By combining recognised certifications with a broad product range, nationwide supply, and installation ready extinguishers, we aim to help customers complete projects efficiently without compromising safety or product quality.”

Portable extinguishers sold by the company carry a five year warranty against material defects, subject to conditions. These conditions include servicing every six months in accordance with AS 1851. Fire Factory Australia also offers free delivery within the Sydney metro area for qualifying orders of more than $500.

Beyond extinguishers, customers can source smoke alarms in Australia and LED emergency lighting in Australia through the company’s consolidated fire safety product range.
