

Influential Women Features Heather S. Dondis: Head Of PR, Sponsorships And Partnerships At Harbor Capital Advisors

MA, UNITED STATES, August 20, 2026
/EINPresswire.com/ -- Boston-Based Executive Combines Three Decades of Strategic Communications, Industry Advocacy, and a Commitment to Meaningful Impact

Boston, Massachusetts — Heather S. Dondis is a seasoned financial services marketing executive with more than 30 years of experience spanning communications, media strategy, thought leadership, and investment industry engagement. As Head of PR, Sponsorships and Partnerships at Harbor Capital Advisors, Inc., she leads the firm's media, sponsorship, and partnership strategy, helping strengthen its external voice and deliver insightful, actionable content to financial advisors and investors navigating an increasingly complex market environment.

Over more than six years with Harbor Capital Advisors, including over four years in her current leadership role, Heather has helped shape communications strategies that connect investment expertise with the needs of the marketplace. Her work is grounded in a belief that effective financial communications should not simply convey information, but make complex investment concepts understandable, relevant, and useful.

Heather began her financial services marketing career shortly after earning a Bachelor of Arts in Psychology from the University of Massachusetts Amherst. What began as an entry into the workforce developed into a decades-long career dedicated to strategic communications and investor and advisor education. During a distinguished 15-year tenure at T. Rowe Price, as well as throughout other senior positions, she gained experience in content strategy, product development, marketing communications, and thought leadership.

Heather's career has consistently reflected an ability to translate sophisticated investment concepts into accessible insights while building trusted relationships across the financial services industry. Today, she continues to bring that expertise to her work at Harbor Capital Advisors, where communications, partnerships, and industry engagement remain central to her leadership.

Beyond her professional responsibilities, Heather is deeply committed to advocacy, mentorship, and community involvement. She serves as Vice Chair of the Active Managers Council for the Investment Adviser Association and participates in organizations including WIPN (Women in Pensions Network). Her dedication to service also includes volunteer involvement with the Alzheimer's Association and participation in the Pan-Mass Challenge.

Heather attributes her professional success to a strong desire to help and educate others, the unwavering support of her family, and the meaningful professional relationships she has developed throughout her career. Among the most valuable pieces of advice she has received is to trust her instincts, recognizing that intuition can often provide important guidance when making difficult decisions.

Heather is equally passionate about encouraging the next generation of women in financial services. She urges young women entering the industry to aim higher than they initially believe possible and pursue their ambitions with confidence, recognizing the opportunities available to them.

Looking ahead, Heather sees regulation, education, and innovation as defining forces shaping the financial services landscape. Evolving regulatory requirements demand adaptability, while continuous education remains essential for professionals seeking to remain competitive. At the same time, innovation continues to create opportunities for growth and new approaches to serving investors and advisors.

Integrity, commitment, advocacy, and meaningful results remain central to Heather's personal and professional philosophy. Whether through strategic communications, mentorship, industry leadership, or community service, she remains dedicated to creating value, supporting others, and contributing to the continued advancement of the financial services profession.
