

Building While Giving Expands Remodeling Services to Castle Rock and Arvada

Denver-based remodeling contractor known for its charitable giving model broadens service area to Castle Rock and Arvada homeowners

DENVER, CO, UNITED STATES, August 23, 2026 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Building While Giving, a Denver-based residential remodeling contractor that donates 5% of every project to a client-chosen charity, today announced it is actively expanding its service area to include Castle Rock and Arvada. The move responds to increased homeowner inquiries from both communities as the company's kitchen, bathroom, and basement remodeling work has grown beyond its original Denver-metro base.

A finished basement family room in Arvada, CO, the kind of project driving Building While Giving's expansion into Castle Rock and Arvada this year.

Owner Roberto Diaz said the expansion reflects both demand and a broader goal for the business. "Castle Rock and Arvada homeowners have been reaching out to us for months," said Diaz. "We wanted to make sure we could serve them the same way we serve Denver by providing honest quotes, clear timelines, and no surprises mid-project. That's our expansion goal."

Castle Rock and Arvada homeowners have been reaching out for months. We wanted to serve them the same way we serve Denver: honest quotes, clear timelines, no surprises mid-project.”

Roberto Diaz, Owner, Building While Giving

Building While Giving's services in both of these new markets mirrors its core offerings: full kitchen and bathroom remodels, basement finishing, home additions and ADU construction, and whole-home renovations. The company also continues to serve the Denver metro and Colorado mountain communities including Breckenridge and Vail.

Basement finishing has become one of the company's most requested project types in Castle

Rock and Arvada, as homeowners in both areas look to add livable square footage (home offices, guest suites, and family rooms) without the cost of a full addition. Building While Giving works with homeowners to plan layouts around practical constraints like egress requirements, ceiling height, and moisture control before any construction begins.

"A lot of basement projects run into trouble because those details get skipped early on," Diaz said. "We walk through all of it upfront so there aren't surprises halfway through."

The company's charitable giving model (5% of every completed project donated to a nonprofit of the client's choosing) remains central to its brand as it grows into new markets. Diaz said the goal is to bring that same model, not just the construction services, to Castle Rock and Arvada homeowners.
