We want students to learn more than cosmetic tattoo techniques. They need the practical skills, infection control knowledge and trainer support to work safely and confidently”

Beauty combines flexible online cosmetic tattoo training with nationally recognised infection-control training, while expanding hands-on options in Melbourne and Sydney.

The National Institute of Beauty (NIB) has strengthened its cosmetic tattoo training offering by combining practical cosmetic tattoo skills training with the nationally recognised infection-control unit HLTINF005 – Maintain infection prevention for skin penetration treatments.

NIB offers students the choice of completing their cosmetic tattoo training online with NIB from anywhere in Australia or undertaking intensive face-to-face practical training in Melbourne or Sydney.

The online program covers some of the industry's most popular cosmetic tattoo techniques, including Nano Brows, Ombre/Powder Brows, Permanent Eyeliner and Lip Tattooing, with students progressing from theory and practice skins through to practical work on live models.

What makes the program particularly significant is the inclusion of HLTINF005 – Maintain infection prevention for skin penetration treatments.

The nationally recognised unit covers the skills and knowledge required to maintain infection prevention during skin penetration procedures, including managing contamination risks, cleaning and disinfection, sterilisation, safe handling and disposal of sharps, and compliance with relevant health requirements.

For an industry involving procedures that penetrate the skin, NIB believes infection prevention should form a fundamental part of professional training.

Bringing Practical Assessment to Online Training

NIB has specialised in online beauty education for more than 16 years and has developed its online delivery model specifically around practical skills.

Rather than simply watching videos and completing theory modules, cosmetic tattoo students progressively submit their practical work for assessment by experienced trainers.

Students begin by developing their technique on practice skins before progressing to live models. Practical work is submitted through NIB's mobile training platform, allowing trainers to review students' work and provide personalised feedback.

This approach is designed to address one of the biggest concerns students have about learning a practical beauty skill online: whether they will receive enough individual guidance.

Students also receive lifetime access to their course materials and refresher training, allowing them to return to their training after completing the program.

In-Person Cosmetic Tattoo Training in Melbourne and Sydney

For students who prefer intensive face-to-face instruction, NIB also offers in-person cosmetic tattoo training in Melbourne and Sydney.

The practical training gives students the opportunity to work directly with experienced cosmetic tattoo trainers while developing their technique and confidence in a supervised environment.

Both delivery options are designed around the same objective: helping students develop practical, commercially relevant cosmetic tattoo skills while understanding the hygiene and infection-prevention responsibilities associated with skin penetration services.

Training for a Growing Beauty Specialisation

Cosmetic tattooing has become an increasingly established part of the Australian beauty industry, with treatments such as powder brows, nano brows, lip blush and permanent eyeliner providing beauty professionals with additional services they can offer clients.

NIB's training is suitable both for people entering the industry and existing beauty professionals looking to add cosmetic tattoo services to their skill set.

Professional cosmetic tattoo kits are also available with relevant course packages, providing students with the equipment and products required for their practical training.

Students completing NIB's cosmetic tattoo skills training receive a Certificate of Completion, while HLTINF005 is delivered and assessed as a nationally recognised unit of competency through the National Institute of Beauty, a Registered Training Organisation.

16+ Years of Online Beauty Education

The National Institute of Beauty has delivered beauty education for more than 16 years, with students throughout Australia studying areas including nail technology, lashes, brows, skin treatments, hair and cosmetic tattooing.

Its training model combines flexible online learning with practical assessment, trainer feedback seven days a week and lifetime course access.

NIB's online cosmetic tattoo courses also carry a 14-day money-back guarantee, giving students the opportunity to review the training before committing to completing the program.
