

MioTech Combines with CCX Group's Green Finance Unit to Form Asia's Leading Sustainability and Supply Chain AI Company

CCX-MioTech pairs MioTech's AI for sustainability reporting and supply chain with the green finance institutional reach of China's largest credit ratings group

HONG KONG, August 24, 2026 /EINPresswire.com/ -- MioTech (美奧), the Hong Kong-headquartered sustainability reporting and supply chain AI company, today announced that it has signed definitive agreements to combine with the green finance and ESG business of CCX Group (中誠信), China's largest credit ratings agency. The combined entity, CCX-MioTech (中誠信美奧), will be a premier sustainability and ESG business in Asia, distinguished by its scale and the breadth of its capabilities.

CCX-MioTech will focus on agentic AI for sustainability reporting and sustainable supply chain management — software that maps multi-tier supplier networks, runs supply chain sustainability assessments at scale, tracks emissions and compliance exposure across the value chain, and automates the reporting work that today consumes entire teams. These capabilities will be complemented by CCX's green finance methodologies, ratings franchise and advisory practice, giving clients a single system that connects what happens deep in a supply chain to how it is assessed by the market.

The combination is not an aggregation of two businesses but a systematic integration of software, methodology, data and market access across onshore and offshore markets. MioTech's products, roadmap and client relationships will continue uninterrupted, and MioTech's team will continue to build and operate the group's software and AI stack.

"The next decade of sustainability in Asia will be decided in supply chains, not just in annual reports," said Jason Tu, Founder of MioTech. "Agentic AI is what makes that tractable: software that investigates, assesses and reports across thousands of suppliers without a thousand analysts. Combining with CCX is how we take that to the scale the region needs."

As a first output of the combination, CCX-MioTech will introduce an MCP (Model Context Protocol) service and an AI agent for sustainability reporting. The MCP service exposes the combined group's sustainability data, evaluation methodologies and industry knowledge to clients' own AI assistants and internal systems through standardised interfaces, so that this expertise can be called directly from where clients already work. The reporting agent works from a company's existing data, supporting evidence and applicable disclosure frameworks to handle data consolidation, report drafting, compliance review and translation.

The transaction responds to a market that has shifted decisively over the past two years. Across Asia — from Japan and Korea to Singapore, India and Greater China — sustainability reporting has moved from a voluntary exercise to a compliance obligation, as jurisdictions adopt ISSB-aligned disclosure standards and exchanges make climate reporting mandatory for listed issuers. At the same time, Asian exporters face a widening set of requirements from their largest markets: the EU's Corporate Sustainability Due Diligence Directive (CSDDD), the Carbon Border Adjustment Mechanism (CBAM), the EU Deforestation Regulation (EUDR), and the US Uyghur Forced Labor Prevention Act (UFLPA). Each of these turns on evidence gathered from suppliers several tiers deep, across jurisdictions and in multiple languages — work that is impossible to do manually at scale, and that has become a condition of market access rather than a reporting preference.

The transaction has been signed and remains subject to applicable regulatory approvals.
