Miller continued, "Too many women are complacent, busy, and distracted. America's Women's mission is to empower women right where they live. To know what's happening and what they can do about it. Women have to work together, and it starts in our homes, our churches, our schools, our communities. Women are key decision-makers and critical to the fabric of American culture."

Eden Gordon Hill said, "When I first met Kim Miller, I knew her heart for our nation was founded on faith principles that put our family and our freedoms at the front of the line. For those in the back of the room, pay attention: she is building powerful bridges for this new generation of women to impact the local vote, to give women the powerful platform of kitchen table topics to engage all communities from sea to shining sea."
