

Meili Achieves Comprehensive International Security Certification

DUBLIN, IRELAND, August 26, 2026 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Meili, the leading technology platform enabling direct ancillary distribution, today announced its achieved ISO 27001:2022 certification.

Information security is a vital consideration for enterprise airline and travel companies, many of which are customers of Meili. Achieving this certification ensures that Meili manages information security to its high standards and via internationally recognised best practices.

"Every day our customers and partners depend on Meili for better performance and a trusted, seamless experience for travellers," said Mike McGearty, CEO and Co-Founder, Meili. "This ISO certification ensures that Meili provides the maximum peace of mind as the travel technology sector continues to evolve, and new threats surface every day."

The ISO 27001:2022 certification is the internationally recognised standard for Information Security Management Systems (ISMS) and demonstrates that Meili has implemented a comprehensive, independently audited framework for managing information security risks across the organisation.

In 2025, Meili and its Legal, Compliance, Security and Systems Administrations teams undertook the process of working to achieve this certification. To meet the rigorous standards, the programme introduced new policies, strengthened enterprise risk management, and expanded third-party assurance processes. Meili also updated governance to address and navigate emerging regulations.

"This certification will support our continued growth as cybersecurity becomes a top concern for travel executives in the age of AI," said McGearty. "This certification is the first step in an ongoing commitment to continuous security improvement."

About Meili:

Meili (pronounced “May-Lee”) was co-founded by technology pioneers Mike McGearty and Bobby Healy, former CEO and CTO of CarTrawler.
