

Opulence Entertainment Group Relocates Miami Office to Historic Ingraham Building

The event production firm moves to Suite 1235 at 25 SE 2nd Avenue, placing its team inside a 1927 landmark in downtown Miami's central business district.

MIAMI, FL, UNITED STATES, August 25, 2026 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Opulence Entertainment Group, a full-service event production company serving Miami and the greater South Florida region, has relocated its headquarters to Suite 1235 at 25 SE 2nd Avenue in downtown Miami. The new office places the company inside the Ingraham Building, a 1927 landmark in the city's central business district, and positions its production team within walking distance of the hotels, galleries, civic buildings, and event venues that anchor much of its annual calendar.

Site visits, permit meetings, and vendor walkthroughs that used to eat half a day now take an hour. That time goes straight back into the work our clients actually see.”

The relocation follows sustained growth across the company's corporate events, brand activation, and private celebration divisions. The larger footprint adds dedicated space for creative planning sessions, client presentations, and production coordination, allowing design, logistics, and technical teams to work from a single location during the build phases of large-scale projects.

The Ingraham Building was completed in 1927 and designed by the architectural firm Schultze and Weaver, the same firm responsible for the Waldorf-Astoria in New York and the Biltmore Hotel in Los Angeles. Named after Henry Flagler's chief engineer, the building was renovated in 1990 and remains one of the most recognizable pre-war office structures in downtown Miami. It offers 24-hour access, a staffed lobby security desk, and shared conference facilities.

Opulence Miami Hosting Luxury Brand Events

"Our work happens across Brickell, Wynwood, Miami Beach, Coral Gables, and Coconut Grove, and being in the center of it all changes how quickly we can move," said Taha of Opulence Entertainment Group. "Site visits, permit meetings, and vendor walkthroughs that used to eat half a day now take an hour. That time goes straight back into the work our clients actually see."

The downtown location also shortens the distance to Miami-Dade County permitting offices, a practical consideration for a firm that handles fire marshal approvals, occupancy documentation, electrical permits, and outdoor event compliance on behalf of its clients. Proximity to the county's civic center supports the compliance-driven approach the company applies to staging, lighting, and large-audience productions.

The company provides creative design and decor, stage design and scenic fabrication, lighting and visual installations, entertainment and talent booking, food and beverage programming, event production and management, and safety, risk, and compliance planning. Clients booking Miami event production with Opulence Entertainment Group draw on that full range across corporate meetings and galas, luxury brand launches, conferences and trade shows, private milestone celebrations, nightlife and music productions, and cultural and public events.

The company's client roster includes corporate, hospitality, and consumer brands, and its team has produced events across venue types ranging from beachfront properties to downtown high-rises and large outdoor spaces. Staff includes creative directors, designers, logistics managers, production specialists, certified safety personnel, technical operators, and hospitality professionals.

"Miami sets a high bar. Art Basel, Miami Music Week, South Beach Wine and Food Festival, and the corporate summits in between all raise what guests expect when they walk through a door," said Taha. "The new office is a signal about where we intend to operate, right in the middle of the city that made us."

Alongside Miami, the company serves Fort Lauderdale, West Palm Beach, and the broader South Florida region, scaling from intimate gatherings to large productions through an established network of regional vendors and partners.
