

Fly IT Solution Launches HealthSync, a White-Label Homecare Management Platform

Licensed platform gives homecare providers branded patient records, bedside clinical logging and multi-clinic analytics on their own domain, no subscription.

MINNEAPOLIS, MN, UNITED STATES, August 26, 2026 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Fly IT Solution, a software development firm with engineering operations in Mohali, India and a presence in Minneapolis, has released HealthSync, a white-label homecare management platform that care organizations license and operate under their own brand.

The platform addresses a gap facing small and mid-sized homecare operators: agencies that have outgrown paper charts and shared spreadsheets, but that do not want to route patient data through a third-party subscription product carrying another vendor's name. HealthSync is deployed on the provider's own domain, configured to its clinic structure and service lines, and handed over as a licensed system rather than a rented seat.

At the center of the platform is a patient record built for home and bedside care rather than clinic visits. Each record carries a 30-condition medical history checklist, blood group, allergy information and current medication. Nurses working in the field record care through five structured log sheets feeding, hourly checklists, vitals, respiratory observations and glucose readings entered on a phone or tablet at the point of care and synced in real time to the clinic admin portal.

Vitals captured through those log sheets feed trend views intended to surface deterioration earlier than a periodic chart review would. Clinical data can be exported as branded A4 PDF reports covering vitals, test results and medication, so agencies can hand families, referring physicians or payers a document carrying their own identity.

"Homecare teams are documenting real clinical events in someone's living room, often on a phone, often at 3 a.m.," said Ankush Tarika, Founder of Fly IT Solution. "The software has to be fast enough to use in that moment and structured enough that a supervisor can read it the next morning and know exactly what happened. That was the design constraint we worked to."

The platform is organized around three portals. A nurse portal exposes only assigned patients, their bedside logs and care history. A clinic admin portal handles nurse assignment, patient onboarding, reporting and notifications. A super admin console sits above both, giving groups that run several locations consolidated oversight and analytics on patient progress and nurse performance.

Access control is enforced on the server rather than by hiding interface elements, and data is isolated per clinic a distinction that matters for multi-site operators and for organizations sharing infrastructure across separately branded units. Scheduling and automated reminders for visits and recurring tasks are included in the base configuration.

HealthSync is licensed for a one-time fee of $2,999 rather than a monthly subscription, which includes custom branding, deployment on the client's domain, configuration of clinics, roles, services and log sheets, team training and documentation, a post-launch support window, and three months of server setup and maintenance. Licensees retain full ownership of the deployment.

Fly IT Solution has positioned the product for homecare agencies, nursing homes and long-term care facilities, multi-site clinic groups, and specialized care teams working in diabetes management, respiratory care, post-operative recovery and feeding support.

“Providers kept telling us the same thing they wanted the system to be theirs,” Tarika said. “Their logo, their domain, their data, and no clause that raises the price per nurse every year. Licensing the platform outright turned out to be the answer most of them were looking for.”
