MOHAMMAD ABUERSHAID 2027

The recognition highlights Abuershaid's growing professional profile and his focused practice in California juvenile dependency, Child Protective Services (CPS) defense, parental rights, and proceedings arising under California Welfare and Institutions Code Section 300. Through ALL Trial Lawyers, he represents parents, guardians, relatives, and caregivers involved in child welfare investigations and dependency proceedings across Los Angeles, Orange, San Diego, Riverside, and San Bernardino counties.

Focused Experience in Juvenile Dependency and CPS Defense

Abuershaid has practiced law in California since 2014 and is registered with the State Bar of California as Attorney No. 297270. He earned his Juris Doctor from Western Michigan University Cooley Law School and previously served as a Deputy Public Defender with the Orange County Public Defender's Office.

According to ALL Trial Lawyers, Abuershaid has personally handled more than 2,000 juvenile dependency matters, while attorneys at the firm collectively bring more than 50 years of legal experience and have handled more than 10,000 matters.

Juvenile dependency proceedings can move quickly and may involve significant consequences for families. A CPS investigation can lead to an emergency removal, detention hearings, court-ordered services, restrictions on visitation, placement disputes, and proceedings that may ultimately affect parental rights.

Abuershaid's practice is designed around representing families through these complex proceedings while addressing the legal, evidentiary, and procedural issues that can arise from the initial investigation through later hearings.

Serving Families Across Southern California

ALL Trial Lawyers represent clients involved with several major Southern California child welfare agencies.

In Los Angeles County, the firm represents parents and caregivers facing investigations and juvenile dependency proceedings involving the Los Angeles CPS and DCFS defense attorney. Its practice serves communities including Los Angeles, Long Beach, Pasadena, Glendale, Burbank, Torrance, Lancaster, and Palmdale.

In Orange County CPS lawyer Abuersheid represents families involved with the Orange County Social Services Agency and dependency proceedings. The firm serves communities including Orange, Irvine, Anaheim, Costa Mesa, and Newport Beach.

The firm also handles San Diego County cases involving Child Welfare Services, serving communities such as La Jolla, Chula Vista, Oceanside, Escondido, El Cajon, Carlsbad, and Vista.

In Riverside County, ALL Trial Lawyers represent families involved with the Department of Public Social Services in matters that may include emergency removal proceedings, jurisdiction hearings, disposition, reunification services, placement disputes, review hearings, and permanency proceedings. Its service area includes Riverside, Moreno Valley, Corona, Murrieta, Temecula, Hemet, Menifee, Perris, Indio, and Palm Springs.

In San Bernardino County, the firm represents parents, guardians, relatives, and caregivers involved with Children and Family Services and juvenile dependency courts.

Handling Complex and Disputed Allegations

Juvenile dependency cases can involve allegations of physical abuse, neglect, failure to protect, emotional harm, substance use, domestic violence, positive newborn toxicology results, and other circumstances that may form the basis of a dependency petition.

Some matters also involve complicated medical evidence. When a child presents with an unexplained injury, fracture, head injury, bruising, or other medical condition, concerns raised by physicians, mandated reporters, social workers, or law enforcement may become part of a dependency investigation.

According to the firm, these cases can require careful examination of medical records, factual circumstances, and the evidence underlying the allegations.

The firm also handles cases involving disputed or allegedly false CPS reports, including matters arising during contentious custody disputes, family conflicts, or reports made by third parties. Dependency findings can potentially have consequences beyond juvenile court, including implications for custody proceedings, employment, professional licensing, immigration matters, future child welfare investigations, or related criminal cases.

Coordinating Dependency and Criminal Defense

Another area of Abuershaid's practice involves cases where allegations investigated in juvenile dependency proceedings may also result in criminal exposure.

Parents may simultaneously face a dependency investigation and a criminal investigation involving allegations such as child abuse, child endangerment, domestic violence, sexual abuse, controlled substances, or serious injury.

In such circumstances, decisions made during a dependency proceeding can potentially affect related criminal matters, while developments in a criminal investigation may influence a parent's position in juvenile court. Abuershaid's practice therefore considers the interaction between these proceedings when representing clients facing overlapping legal challenges.

Recognition by Best Lawyers

Best Lawyers' recognition is based on a peer-review methodology designed to identify attorneys who have demonstrated professional excellence. For attorneys practicing in litigation-focused areas, peer recognition can reflect professional relationships and reputation developed through ongoing work within the legal system.

For Abuershaid, the Best Lawyers: Ones to Watch® recognition comes as ALL Trial Lawyers continues to expand its juvenile dependency and CPS defense practice throughout Southern California.

Client-Centered Representation

For many parents, a CPS investigation represents their first experience with juvenile dependency court. Terms such as detention, jurisdiction, disposition, reunification services, monitored visitation, placement, review hearings, and permanency planning can be difficult to navigate while families are simultaneously dealing with the possibility of separation from a child.

Abuershaid emphasizes communication with clients throughout the process, helping families understand the allegations, procedural posture, available legal options, and potential consequences of important decisions.
