New youth baseball travel program brings youth teams and families to the Island for games against local academies, community service, and cultural immersion

SAN JUAN, PUERTO RICO, September 1, 2026 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Passport Sports, LLC, the company behind the Dominican Beisbol Experience, today announced a partnership with Discover Puerto Rico to launch the Puerto Rico Beisbol Experience, bringing fully managed youth baseball travel to Puerto Rico for players, coaches, and families. The interest list is open now.

Baseball is part of who we are in Puerto Rico, and few things tell that story better than PassPort Sports bringing a visiting team to play against our local academies.”

baseball credentials of its own. Organized baseball has been played in Puerto Rico since the 1890s, when the first recorded game took place in the Santurce section of San Juan. More than 400 Puerto Ricans have since reached Major League Baseball, six have been elected to the National Baseball Hall of Fame — Roberto Clemente, Orlando Cepeda, Roberto Alomar, Iván Rodríguez, Edgar Martínez, and Carlos Beltrán — and the Island has fielded a World Baseball Classic team four times. Winter ball has run on the Island for generations in the league that now carries Clemente's name. Visiting teams will play where that tradition is still lived daily.

Every Puerto Rico Beisbol Experience trip is handled end to end and includes:

- * Lodging and transportation managed from arrival to departure
- * Games against local academies, giving players real competition and exposure to Puerto Rico's baseball tradition
- * A community service project connecting teams with local neighborhoods
- * Cultural immersion in the Island's history, food, and people
- * Group excursions to experience Puerto Rico beyond the ballfield
- * Team bonding activities built to develop character on and off the field

Announcing the the Puerto Rico Beisbol Experience for youth baseball travel - coming 2027

A different premise than a travel baseball tournament

Most travel baseball weekends follow the same pattern: a hotel near a complex, a bracket, and a drive home. The Puerto Rico Beisbol Experience is built on a different premise — that a week spent inside another baseball culture develops a young player in ways another tournament cannot. Families travel together and stay together, and the itinerary is designed for parents and siblings as much as for the roster. Coaches get competition against local academies without managing the ground logistics.

The community service component is deliberate. In Puerto Rico, service and baseball are inseparable — a link Roberto Clemente made permanent, and one the Island's clubs and academies still carry. Passport Sports builds a service project into every trip so visiting players participate in that tradition rather than observe it.

International experience without international logistics

For U.S. families, Puerto Rico also removes the friction that keeps some teams home. It is a U.S. territory: no passport is required for U.S. citizens, the currency is the U.S. dollar, and cell phones work as they do on the mainland. San Juan is served by direct flights from cities across the East Coast, Midwest, and South. Teams get an international baseball and cultural experience without an international travel checklist — a meaningful difference for rosters where not every family holds a passport.

Group excursions draw on an island that packs remarkable variety into roughly 100 miles by 35. Old San Juan's cobblestone streets and 16th-century Spanish fortifications form a UNESCO World Heritage Site. El Yunque is the only tropical rainforest in the U.S. National Forest System. Beaches line both the Atlantic and Caribbean coasts, often within an hour of the same hotel.

"Baseball is part of who we are in Puerto Rico, and few things tell that story better than a visiting team playing against one of our local academies," said Carlos Deliz, Sports Tourism Director at Discover Puerto Rico. "This program brings young players and their families into real communities across the Island, and we are proud to help Passport Sports show them the Puerto Rico we know."

"Puerto Rico has an incredible baseball history, and this is about so much more than baseball," said Brennen Flores, Co-Founder of Passport Sports. "We want our players and families to fall in love with the Island the same way we have."

The partnership with Discover Puerto Rico connects Passport Sports with the Island's tourism resources and local communities, so each trip reflects an authentic Puerto Rican experience rather than a packaged one.

Built on a proven program

The Puerto Rico program follows the template Passport Sports built in the Dominican Republic, where the company runs Dominican Beisbol Experience departures at Thanksgiving 2026, the winter holidays, and spring break 2027, with custom dates available year-round. Those trips pair guaranteed games with joint practices at Dominican academies, community service, and an all-inclusive resort stay. Puerto Rico extends that approach to a second destination for teams seeking international youth baseball travel with a shorter flight and simpler paperwork.

Trip dates, pricing, and itineraries will be announced as they are finalized. Teams, coaches, and families can join the interest list now to be first in line at passport-sports.com/trips/puerto-rico-beisbol-experience.
