

BuySocialMediaMarketing Unveils Fully Redesigned Social Media Growth Platform

Everything from Instagram followers to Facebook likes, redesigned: clearer prices, delivery times, verified reviews and 24 free trials

DELAWARE, DE, UNITED STATES, August 28, 2026 /EINPresswire.com/ -- BuySocialMediaMarketing, a social media growth provider founded in 2014, has launched a complete redesign of its website. Close to 100 pages received a new look and structure: the homepage, a dedicated section for each of the eight supported networks — Instagram, TikTok, YouTube, X (Twitter), Facebook, Threads, Spotify and SoundCloud — an individual page for each of the 46 services, 24 free-trial pages, and a rebuilt cart and checkout.

What changed:

- A completely new design across the whole site, built first for phones
- Pages load significantly faster than the previous version
- Every service has its own page: prices for every amount, delivery times, common questions and verified buyer reviews
- 24 free trials that need no payment card — test the quality before ordering
- Every page available in more than 20 languages

The most visible change is how the site is organized. The previous design had grown piece by piece over a decade; the new one was drawn as a single system, so every page follows the same clear pattern. Visitors land on the section for their network, see every available service with its starting price at a glance, and open the one they need. Each service page then walks through the same steps in the same order: what the service does, what each amount costs, how ordering works, when delivery starts and finishes, and what to check if something looks off.

That structure was built around how people actually shop for these services. Most visitors arrive looking for one specific thing — Instagram followers for a profile they are growing, or Facebook likes for a post that needs momentum. Instead of a generic order form, they now get a full page for exactly that service: every package with its exact price, the expected delivery window, answers to the questions buyers most often ask, and reviews left by verified customers who bought that same service. The goal is that a first-time visitor can understand the whole purchase — cost, timing, and what to expect — before reaching the checkout.

Speed received the same attention as the look. The redesigned pages are far lighter than their predecessors and open noticeably faster on both desktop and mobile, which matters for an audience that mostly browses from a phone. The rebuilt cart and checkout follow the same idea: fewer steps, clearer totals, and support for cards, Apple Pay, Google Pay and major cryptocurrencies.

“Most people never search for a growth company by name — they search for the one thing they need, like followers for an Instagram profile or likes on a Facebook post,” said Anna Daimlers, Director at BuySocialMediaMarketing. “So we organized the site the way people shop: one service, one page, with the price, the timeline and the reviews sitting right on it.”

The way ordering works has not changed, and the company considers that a feature. Placing an order requires only a public username or link — never a password or any form of account access. Delivery typically begins within minutes of checkout. Every purchase is covered by two standing protections: a free refill if the delivered count drops within 30 days, and a money-back provision if an order is not fulfilled as described.

For visitors who want proof before spending anything, the redesigned site keeps its free-trial program front and center: 24 trials across all eight networks, claimed with just a username and an email address. A trial delivers a small amount of the real service — free likes, followers, views or plays — so newcomers can watch the delivery arrive on their own profile first.

“The trials carry more weight than any marketing copy could,” Daimlers added. “A creator who claims twenty free likes and sees them land has learned everything that matters about us. After that, our job is just to keep the pages honest.”

The redesigned site serves the four groups the company has grown with: creators and influencers building an audience, businesses and brands adding social proof, musicians and artists launching releases, and agencies managing growth for client rosters. It is live now at buysocialmediamarketing.com, in more than 20 languages, with free trials open on every network.
