During GITEK AI Türkiye, Letsia plans to explore opportunities relevant to several areas of its portfolio, including artificial intelligence, fintech, digital infrastructure, cloud technologies, and technology-focused education and professional development.

The group also expects to hold meetings with companies and organizations during the event to identify potential areas of cooperation that could develop into partnerships, investments, or joint initiatives in the future.

Letsia's participation in Istanbul reflects the group's broader approach of using major international technology events not only to strengthen its global presence, but also to build practical relationships and identify new opportunities for long-term growth.

The invitation from Invest in Türkiye further provides Letsia with an opportunity to engage directly with Türkiye's investment and technology ecosystem as the group continues evaluating opportunities across regional and international markets.
