TERRACE, British Columbia, August 27, 2026 / Inderpal Singh Dhillon, a Terrace City Councillor, entrepreneur, former Liberal Member of Parliament candidate for Skeena—Bulkley Valley and active member of the Sikh community, recently met with prominent Sikh preacher Bhai Ranjit Singh Ji Khalsa Dhadrianwale during his 2026 British Columbia visit.

The meeting brought together two prominent community figures and highlighted Dhillon's continuing involvement across civic leadership, Canadian politics and Sikh community life.

Faith community and public service are deeply connected. It was an honour to meet Bhai Ranjit Singh Ji and share this meaningful moment with the Sikh community.”

Inderpal Singh Dhillon

Dhillon has been a regular presence at the Terrace gurdwara, participating in religious, cultural and community gatherings, including Sunday programs. His involvement in Sikh community life has continued alongside his responsibilities as a municipal councillor and his active participation in federal Liberal politics.

Dhillon was elected to Terrace City Council in 2022 before entering federal politics as the Liberal candidate for Skeena—Bulkley Valley in the 2025 federal election. Elections Canada records Dhillon as the Liberal candidate and a Terrace city councillor, with 4,923 votes recorded in the election.

His political involvement has continued beyond the 2025 campaign. Dhillon is a committed supporter of Prime Minister Mark Carney and remains active in Liberal meetings, political events and community engagements. He has also appeared alongside Carney during political visits and meetings, maintaining a visible connection with Canada's federal Liberal leadership.

That political engagement has given Dhillon a profile extending beyond Terrace and into broader conversations about Northwest British Columbia's economic, social and community future.

His meeting with Bhai Ranjit Singh Ji represents another important part of that public profile.

Bhai Ranjit Singh Ji Khalsa Dhadrianwale has developed a significant following among Sikh communities in Canada and internationally through religious discourses focused on Gurbani, personal reflection, practical living and contemporary applications of Sikh teachings.

His 2026 Canadian tour included major Sikh gatherings in Alberta and British Columbia, including a four-day series of programs in Abbotsford from July 23 through July 26.

For Dhillon, meeting Bhai Ranjit Singh Ji was particularly meaningful because of his own longstanding participation in Sikh community life.

The meeting also reflects the growing connection between Sikh communities throughout British Columbia. While major Sikh population centres are concentrated in the Lower Mainland, Sikh families and community organizations have become increasingly established throughout northern British Columbia, including Terrace and the wider Skeena region.

As a Terrace City Councillor, he represents a northern British Columbia community at the municipal level. As the former Liberal candidate for Skeena—Bulkley Valley, he brought that regional perspective into federal politics. As an entrepreneur, he has participated in the economic development of the Terrace region. And through his continued presence at Sikh religious and cultural gatherings, he remains closely connected to the community that forms an important part of his personal and public identity.

The photograph of Dhillon alongside Bhai Ranjit Singh Ji captures that intersection of faith, community and public leadership.

It is also a reflection of the increasingly prominent role Sikh Canadians are playing in Canada's civic and political life.

From municipal government and federal politics to entrepreneurship, religious institutions and community organizations, Sikh Canadians are contributing across virtually every part of Canadian society.

For Northwest British Columbia, Dhillon's continued engagement provides another link between Terrace and the wider provincial and national community.

His meeting with Bhai Ranjit Singh Ji therefore represents more than a single appearance. It reflects a continuing commitment to community participation while highlighting the connection between northern British Columbia, Sikh community life and Canada's broader political landscape.

For Dhillon, the occasion brought together several important elements of his public journey, his roots in Terrace, his service on city council, his experience as a federal Liberal candidate, his continuing support for Mark Carney and the Liberal movement, and his longstanding participation in Sikh community life.

The result was a meaningful meeting that connected civic leadership, political engagement and faith within the diverse Canadian landscape.

Inderpal Singh Dhillon is a Terrace City Councillor, entrepreneur and community leader in Northwest British Columbia. He was elected to Terrace City Council in 2022 and served as the Liberal candidate for Skeena—Bulkley Valley in the 2025 federal election. He remains active in civic, political, cultural and Sikh community activities throughout British Columbia.
