The Training Industry Top 20 Online Learning Library Companies list recognizes providers based on the scope and quality of their course libraries, innovation, market presence, customer relationships, and business performance.

"Our mission is to help organizations build safer, more productive and more capable workforces," said Mandy

Owen, Vice President, Content of HSI. "This recognition reflects the strength of our learning content, the expertise behind it and our commitment to helping organizations develop skills, improve performance and create lasting business impact."

HSI's online learning library includes more than 5,000 courses and learning assets spanning workplace safety, compliance, human resources, leadership and professional development, industrial skills, environmental health and safety, and industry-specific training. The content is designed to support organizations as they address workforce readiness, regulatory requirements, employee development, and operational performance goals.

According to Jalen Banks, market research analyst at Training Industry, Inc., this year's honorees "distinguished themselves through the breadth and quality of their content offerings, along with the innovative capabilities that power their learning experiences."

"This recognition is especially meaningful because it reflects the growing role learning plays across the entire organization," said Owen. "Training is no longer owned by a single department. From safety and compliance to leadership development and workforce readiness, organizations need learning solutions that help employees build the knowledge and skills required to succeed."

The award further reinforces HSI's position as a trusted partner for organizations seeking to reduce risk, improve performance and create a culture of continuous learning. By combining extensive content libraries, expert-developed training and integrated technology solutions, HSI enables organizations to connect learning directly to business outcomes.
