With Debut EP JUICE

The six-track project blends pop, rap, and R&B while exploring confidence, love, desire, and self-expression.

Bianca Taylor is stepping into a new chapter with the release of her debut EP, JUICE, available now on all major streaming platforms.

The six-track project marks Taylor's official introduction as a recording artist, combining pop with rap and R&B influences to create a sound that feels playful, feminine, confident, and unapologetic.

At the heart of JUICE is the idea of owning what makes you different.

"For me, JUICE is about confidence and really owning who you are," Taylor says. "Everyone has something that makes them special, and I want people to feel that when they listen to this project. I want them to feel confident enough to go after the things they want."

The EP opens with "Renaissance," an energetic introduction to Taylor's new era and a fitting title for an artist exploring a new side of her creativity. The song is accompanied by a full music video, available now on Taylor's YouTube channel.

From there, JUICE moves through different sides of Taylor's personality. "Who She" and “Supernova Ballet” lean into the project’s confident, larger-than-life energy, while “Starfruit” adds a playful, colorful edge to the tracklist.

The project becomes more personal with “Tattoo,” a romantic song inspired by Taylor’s relationship with her husband, Nimai. The track reflects the feeling of having someone leave a lasting mark on your life.

On the other end of the spectrum is “I’ll K You,” a provocative and playful love song about the more intense—and slightly crazy—side of being in love. Rather than taking itself too seriously, the track embraces the exaggerated jealousy and obsession that can come with passionate relationships.

“I think there are a lot of different sides of me in this EP,” Taylor says. “There’s the confident side, the romantic side, the sexy side, and the side that doesn’t take herself too seriously. I wanted the music to feel like me.”

Taylor worked with producers Black Jab (Jabari Thornhill) and Top Secret (Ryan Anderson) throughout the project. Mixing engineer Tim Moore handled the mixing, with Lauren Torres and Gregory Wresilo joining Taylor as co-writers on the project.

While JUICE introduces Taylor’s first body of work as an artist, she views the EP as the beginning of the process rather than a finished definition of her sound.

“This is my first EP, so I’m still figuring things out and finding my sound,” she says. “I’m excited to keep creating and see where the music takes me.”

For Taylor, stepping into music is a natural extension of the message she has shared throughout her career: confidence comes from being willing to be yourself.

With JUICE, she is taking that message somewhere new.

The debut EP is available now on all major streaming platforms.
