The donation is part of Chubb Law's ongoing monthly community giving initiative, through which the Central Florida personal injury firm awards $1,000 to a deserving local organization each month, along with additional donations made in honor of current and former clients celebrating birthdays. This month's combined contribution totals $1,380.

“We are incredibly grateful for the organizations that work every day to make Central Florida a stronger and more compassionate place,” said Mitch Chubb, founder of Chubb Law. “Recovery House is doing important work to give people the support, stability, and hope they need to rebuild their lives. We're honored to help shine a light on their mission.”

Based in Sanford, Recovery House of Central Florida provides a holistic residential recovery program for individuals working to overcome addiction and other significant life challenges. Its services extend beyond providing a place to live, with programs designed to help residents develop the skills and support systems necessary for long-term stability and independence.

Residents can receive addiction education, counseling, life-skills development, vocational training, and assistance rebuilding family relationships. Recovery House also provides aftercare focused on long-term sobriety, relapse prevention, and successful reintegration into the community.

One aspect of the organization's mission that particularly resonates with Chubb Law is its commitment to making services available regardless of a person's ability to pay.

Recovery House is also preparing for an exciting expansion of its mission. The organization is on track to build a home specifically for women, creating additional capacity to serve people in need and providing a safe, supportive environment where residents can work toward recovery and self-sufficiency.

“Organizations like Recovery House remind us that community support is about more than writing a check,” Chubb said. “It’s about learning about the people doing the work, understanding the challenges they’re addressing, and helping share their stories so more people can discover the resources available in their own community.”

Chubb Law’s commitment to Central Florida extends beyond its legal practice. The firm regularly supports local organizations and dedicates time and resources to community service. Its community giving initiative reflects the firm’s belief that serving others is an important part of being a local business and neighbor.

In addition to its community involvement, Chubb Law represents individuals and families throughout Central Florida who have been injured in accidents.
